Highways to the End of the World Edward Simpson,2022-11-04 This book argues that road building was naturalised in the twentieth century to the point of common sense integrating roadbuilding into a system of climate change denial hidden within a broad international development imperative But if we can read South Asian roads as forms of governance and knowledge we can challenge the region s established geopolitical narratives and the idea of a never ending future Highways to the End of the World explores the political economy of these ideas by focusing on the history of this phenomenon and on the road builders of South Asia themselves How do these flamboyant and controversial roadmen think about their work and the future of the planet What do roads do and why And how did they become central to the region s nationalist and developmental projects in the first place Simpson s fascinating ethnographic account takes us from fume filled toll booths in the heart of India via overworked government offices in Pakistan to pharaonic bridges in the Indian Ocean Simpson follows the money explores the politics of evidence and argues against the utopian hyperbole of present day road talk finding both humanitarian crises and freewheeling international capital in the hedgerows Roads have never been so interesting or so controversial

Shaping Up: Art drawings, Essays, Poetry and Interpretations Rinos Mwanaka,2021-08-31 Shaping Up is more personal and intimate than the author s previous works The poems and images reflect a period while he was living outside of Zimbabwe in South Africa The immigrant experience gives the work a more personal closed abstracted feel driven by loneliness of the exilic condition Living in the element uninhibited and careless can help deal with confounding controversial issues more easily this theme can be dissected from the drawings to do with sex sexuality and gender issues The line breaks whirls thins out sometimes is bold sometimes is barely there thus the drawings straddle the tenuousness of time and life
