Fluri,Rachel Lehr,2017 The 2001 invasion of Afghanistan by United States and coalition forces was followed by a flood of aid and development dollars and experts representing well over two thousand organizations each with separate policy initiatives geopolitical agendas and socioeconomic interests This book examines the everyday actions of people associated with this international effort with a special emphasis on small players individuals and groups who charted alternative paths outside the existing networks of aid and development This focus highlights the complexities complications and contradictions at the intersection of the everyday and the geopolitical showing how dominant geopolitical narratives influence daily life in places like Afghanistan and what happens when the goals of aid workers or the needs of aid recipients do not fit the narrative Specifically this book examines the use of gender need and grief as drivers for both common and exceptional responses to geopolitical interventions Throughout this work Jennifer L. Fluri and Rachel Lehr describe intimate encounters at a microscale to complicate and dispute the ways in which Afghans and their country have been imagined described fetishized politicized vilified and rescued The authors identify the ways in which Afghan men and women have been narrowly categorized as perpetrators and victims respectively They discuss several projects to show how gender and grief became forms of currency that were exchanged for different social economic and political opportunities Such entanglements suggest the power and influence of the United States while illustrating the ways in which individuals and groups have attempted to chart alternative avenues of interaction intervention and interpretation

networked learning was 15 year ago where it is today and where it is likely to be headed Each chapter brings a particular perspective to the themes of design experience and practice of networked learning the chosen focus of the book The chapters in the book embrace a wide field of educational areas including those of higher education informal learning work based learning continuing professional development academic staff development and management learning The Design Experience and Practice of Networked Learning will prove indispensable reading for researchers teachers consultants and instructional designers in higher and continuing education for those involved in staff and educational development and for those studying post graduate qualifications in learning and teaching This the second volume in the Springer Book Series on Researching Networked Learning is based on a selection of papers presented at the 2012 Networked Learning Conference held in Maastricht The Netherlands

The Evolutionary Leap to Flourishing Individuals and Organizations Center for Evolutionary Learning,2017-09-19 The last thing the world needs is yet another book delineating business induced dangers and damages such as environmental disasters social inequalities and unethical conduct And yet success in achieving sustainable growth whether for the individual organization or the social community has mostly eluded us Just as a compass needle moves to magnetic north our deeply seated behaviours push us back to practices that are familiar and comfortable even when we have sought to make a change to act in ways that are more sustainable How can we generate this deep and durable change in our values and beliefs and thus both in our individual and collective decisions and behaviour at work How can we unveil the best of our human qualities by learning to raise our consciousness to a more profound perception of ourselves and our relationship with the whole And what if such a change could lead to an evolutionary leap to a lasting flourishing state for us and for our organizations This book describes how this shift in mindset and consciousness level can and has indeed taken place in organizations using meditative practice not only for individual wellbeing which is now well understood but also for deep transformational change Through this shift we can move past a definition of sustainability as mere resource efficiency and long term survival to one of sustainability as flourishing This book challenges many pre conceived ideas about what a sustainably successful organization is and how it should be run Based on a growing body of evidence from neuroscience to business research it maps out a path to empower all who wish to undertake this journey towards the realization of the highest potential in ourselves our organizations and our social and natural world

Scientific Modeling and Simulations Sidney Yip, Tomas Diaz Rubia, 2010-04-07. Although computational modeling and simulation of material deformation was initiated with the study of structurally simple materials and inert environments there is an increasing demand for predictive simulation of more realistic material structure and physical conditions. In particular it is recognized that applied mechanical force can plausibly alter chemical reactions inside materials or at material interfaces though the fundamental reasons for this chemomechanical coupling are studied in a material specific manner. Atomistic level simulations can provide insight into the unit processes that facilitate kinetic reactions within complex materials but the typical nanosecond timescales of such simulations are in contrast to the second scale to hour scale timescales of experimentally accessible or technologically relevant timescales. Further in complex materials these key unit processes are rare events due to the high energy barriers associated with those processes. Examples of such rare events include unbinding between two proteins that tether biological cells to extracellular materials 1 unfolding of complex polymers stiffness and bond breaking in amorphous glasses and gels 2 and diffusive hops of point defects within crystalline alloys 3.
