The second part of the book focuses on the difficulties in practice of implementing policies aimed at investing in children's lives and futures. It reviews the role of science in the identification of risk factors related to poor outcomes for children and in the selection of target groups or areas for risk based intervention to provide early support and preventative programmes for children and their families. It also assesses whether and how law does or could help to deliver an appropriate investment of time and money in children with a focus on the existence and effectiveness of a rights based approach. The final chapters examine the results of research so far undertaken done on selected programmes in the Every Child Matters social inclusion and Youth Justice Board policy agendas and they identify promising developments. However they also draw attention to the alternative agendas around children and young people which are competing for government money and the public's support and warn that there are dangers in a child focused policy whose justification relies so heavily on future cost savings stemming from the production of healthier more employable and law abiding adults.
