Season Of The Jew:

Season of the Jew Maurice Shadbolt, 2011 During the nineteenth century New Zealand Wars a colonial soldier relates how Te Kooti and his band of Maori tribesmen identify with the Jews of ancient Israel stripped of their lands and exiled

Spiritcarvers Antonella Sarti, 2022-06-08 In a land caught between the sea and cloud where the natural landscape still refuses civilization there are those the composers of words tellers of tales that help shape the minds of the people that live on its shores They are spiritcarvers New Zealand writing today is engaging in an intent struggle to subvert multiple shapes into voices These interviews as a record of biographical orature are shaped into presenting the figure of the storyteller through memory and language explorations of how we imagine and create ourselves with and into words Here we encounter the dichotomy of fiction and non fiction myth and consensual reality imagination and truth do we live within our own selected fictions Identity is shaped by the authors sense of displacement as well as of belonging meeting otherness with dispossession discovering connection through isolation Among the focal points of the interviews are the role of women s writing Maori writing interrelations among different cultures and the influence of literary and oral tradition within New Zealand

Maurice Shadbolt's Season Of The Jew and Michael Blake's Dances With Wolves Oliver

Steinert-Lieschied, 2006-08-09 Seminar paper from the year 2005 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Literature grade 2.5 University of Göttingen course Literature of New Zealand language English abstract Title The Concept of the Noble Ignoble Savage in 20th Century New World Novels Maurice Shadbolt's Season Of The Jew and Michael Blake's Dances With Wolves Confrontation of civilized Europeans with foreign primitive peoples has mostly been disadvantageous for the latter The easiest way to deal with the strangeness of indigenous people was to regard them in a stereotypical way Stereotypes such as the noble and the ignoble savage were used to deprive such cultures of their humanity and to justify colonization and genocide These stereotypes also found their way into European literature In this work I will analyze how the authors Maurice Shadbolt and Michael Blake deal with such stereotypes in their novels Season Of The Jew and Dances With Wolves respectively I chose to compare these novels because they have many similarities but on the other hand also enough differences to make them an interesting comparison Both novels are considered to be historical novels but there are some differences in the dealing with stereotypes which I consider to be an important aspect of historical novels in general Firstly I will draw an outline of the history of the terms noble and ignoble savage and then make a concise definition of the terms The next step will be a short book portrait of both novels in order to compare them to each other In the main part of this work I will analyze how the concepts of the noble savage and the ignoble savage are dealt with in both novels This will be done in consideration of various aspects which before have been presented in the definition of the terms Extract from the main text d Behaviour And Further Criteria One thing which astonished many European travellers was the missing idea of property among indigenous people Many writers such as Lahontan were of the opinion that the noble savage had no mine and thine an idea which was closely associated with the idea of the utopian Golden Age This presented indigenous people in a light that made them appear to be content and not greedy Other people such as Volney and Darwin were of the opinion that because their own European society was based on the idea of property the missing of exactly this idea among indigenous people was a further proof that they were not civilized and therefore inferior Although Europeans as well as indigenous people made wars the difference lay in their motives
