Roemer,1996 Nice idea but it doesn't work in practice How often have socialists had this claim thrown back at them And now after the events of 1989 many of the Left are openly wondering what a defensible idea of socialism would be This work addresses this question taking as its point of departure John Roemer's model of coupon socialism Roemer's model aims to combine the market with a commitment to equality through a simple yet starkly radical proposal all citizens would receive an equal number of coupons with which to buy ownership rights voting dividends in companies These coupons would constitute a second separate form of currency but could not be exchanged for ordinary money nor transferred to other people Not all the contributors to this collection endorse Roemer's working model of market socialism but they are all stimulated by his foray into a real utopia

The book introduces the new concept of innovation communities defining them as informal networks of like minded individuals who act as innovation promoters or champions. These key figures come from various companies and organisations and will team up in a project related fashion jointly promoting a certain innovation product or idea either on one or across different levels of an innovation system. The publication presents findings from surveys that demonstrate that networks of champions are a success factor in radical innovation. Five case studies of noteworthy innovation projects illustrate why the collaboration of champions can make innovation projects more successful. Furthermore the book presents hands on methods and includes best practice cases and guidelines on how to develop innovation communities. This publication comprises empirical findings and practical experiences that are valuable for the following groups in particular: Entrepreneurs, Innovation R&D, Innovation and strategy consultants, Innovation and start up intermediaries, Innovation researchers, Government officials and politicians responsible for R&D and innovation programmes and funding.

Fair Shared Cities Marion Roberts, 2016-04-15

Bringing together a diverse team of leading scholars and professionals this book offers a variety of insights into ongoing gender mainstreaming policies in Europe with a focus on urban spatial planning. Gender mainstreaming was first legislated for in the European Union with the Treaty of Amsterdam in 1999 and although many interesting developments have occurred throughout the decade that followed there is still much to do in terms of policy knowledge production dissemination and education. This work contributes to all three objectives by advancing the state of knowledge as well as providing educational and professional tools in the field of gender sensitive planning in Europe. The volume begins by explaining the concept of gender mainstreaming in relation to its origins in the second wave of the women's movement and critiques of planning architecture transport planning and other built environment disciplines. It then provides a brief history of how gender mainstreaming was incorporated into European law before focussing on the theoretical issues and questions that surround the concept of gender mainstreaming as they relate to urban space and the planning of cities and regions including a discussion of the persistence of inequalities between the sexes in their access to urban space and services. In particular the division between waged and unwaged work and its impact on the social construction of gender and of the physical built environment is considered. The differences between definitions of feminism and their implications for action in planning and design are also explored paying regard to the tensions between a feminist vision of a transformation of gender relations and the requirements of gender mainstreaming to accommodate the different needs of women and men in their everyday lives in urban space. Throughout the book key issues recur such as the importance of time and space in the experience of urbanism resistances to change on the part of institutions and social structures and the importance of networks. Education and training also appear as common themes as do citizen participation and the structures of governance. The chapters are organised into four sections: concepts structures empowerment and spatial quality. Contributors demonstrate a variety of approaches to the intersections of gender women cities and planning dealing with substantive and procedural issues in planning at both local and regional scales They stress the links between environmental sustainability and gender sensitive urban development The book concludes by putting forward an outlook for future action Hearings, Reports and Prints of the Senate Select Committee on Small Business United States. Congress. Senate. Select Committee on Small Business,1978 The Sketch ,1903
