Presentday Dialectology:

Present-day Dialectology Jan Berns, Jaap van Marle, 2011-05-12 Present day Dialectology does not treat dialectology as an isolated discipline. Instead, it discusses dialectological topics within the framework of present day linguistics. The book contains papers which seek to confront recent phonological, morphological, syntactic and semantic theory with dialectological data. In addition, it explores the link between dialectology on the one hand and sociolinguistics and the study of language contact on the other.

Historical Dialectology Jacek Fisiak, 2011-06-01 In this volume of 29 papers, readers interested in language variation and historical linguistics will find interesting theoretical proposals as well as suggestions concerning ways of approaching previously unsolved empirical problems in the field. The papers deal with various aspects of historical regional dialectology and some border on the issue of dialectology and linguistic change. Although many deal with English, a number discuss Romance languages in general as well as Norwegian, German, Celtic languages of the eastern Alpine region, Coptic and Fox. Some are devoted to more general issues. The language specific contributions also often cover areas of a more general nature. The results indicate new vistas for further productive research in the area of historical dialectology.

Current Approaches to Limits and Areas in Dialectology Xosé Álvarez, Ernestina Carrilho, Catarina Magro, 2013-09-17 Defining the geographical space of linguistic variation and drawing the areal distribution of linguistic variants are classical issues in dialectology. Over recent decades, advances in geolinguistic methods along with new trends in the study of linguistic variation have significantly shaped new ways of approaching limits and areas in dialectology. This volume is at the crossroads of recent methodological and conceptual developments in dialectology and brings together contributions offering an unusual panorama of case studies from Basque, Romance, Germanic, Celtic and Slavic languages. The seventeen chapters in this volume address a wide spectrum of issues exploring new approaches to the interplay of dialect areas and time and society. Part I: current quantitative methods of studying dialect limits. Part II: and linguistic geovariation focused on lexical, prosodic, syntactic or morphosyntactic topics. Part III: One of the unique features of the volume is the important collection of contributions addressing issues of dialect syntax, a recent and rapidly growing field of linguistic research.

Dialectology meets Typology Bernd Kortmann, 2008-08-22 In what ways can dialectologists and language typologists profit from each other's work when looking across the fence? This is the guiding question of this volume, which involves follow-up questions such as: How can dialectologists profit from adopting the large body of insights in and hypotheses on language variation and language universals familiar from work in language typology, notably functional typology? Vice versa, what can typologists learn from the study of non-standard varieties? What are possible contributions of dialectology to areal typologies and the study of grammaticalization? What are important theoretical and methodological implications of this new type of collaboration in the study of language variation? The 18 contributors among them many distinguished dialectologists sociolinguists and typologists address these and other novel questions on the basis of analyses of the morphology and syntax of a broad range of dialects Germanic Romance Balto Slavic Indo Aryan

Language and Space Peter Auer, Jürgen Erich Schmidt, 2010 The dimensions of time and space fundamentally cause and shape the variability of all human language To reduce investigation of this insight to manageable proportions researchers have traditionally concentrated on the deepest dialects But it is increasingly apparent that although most people still speak with a distinct regional coloring the new mobility of speakers in recently industrialized and postindustrial societies and the efflorescence of communication technologies cannot be ignored This has given rise to a reconsideration of the relationship between geographical place and cultural space and the fundamental link between language and a spatially bounded territory Language and Space An International Handbook of Linguistic Variation seeks to take full account of these developments in a comprehensive theoretically rich way The introductory volume examines the concept of space and linguistic approaches to it the structure and dynamics of language spaces and relevant research methods A second volume offers the first thorough exploration of the interplay between linguistic investigation and cartography and subsequent volumes uniformly document the state of research into the spatial dimension of particular language groupings Key features comprehensive coverage of the field in terms of theory and methods the unique volume stands alone since it neither is a handbook of dialectology or of areal linguistics nor a handbook on language variation alone gathers together a great number of distinguished scholars and experts in the field

Contact Morphology in Modern Greek Dialects Angela Ralli, 2016-02-22 This volume bridges contemporary morphological theory with the less studied aspects of language interference and contact induced variation and change and will serve to increase the reader's understanding of how languages of divergent typologies can affect each other On the one hand it shows that the study of dialects offers new challenges to contact morphology and on the other it argues that morphological theory may provide accurate and interesting tools for the analysis of dialectal data In addition it proves that dialectal contact morphology can be profitable for historical linguistics and typology since it may shed light on language change and structures The book brings together researchers working on morphology language contact and Modern Greek dialects namely those that have been heavily affected by typologically divergent and sometimes genetically different languages that is by the Indo European and semi fusional Romance languages and by the Altaic and agglutinative Turkish Emphasis is placed on a number of issues which are of major importance to contact morphology such as the role and interplay of language internal and language external factors in linguistic change the borrowing of word structure and functional categories the source and use of
