To the right of the main building, there is a tall, slender tower with a domed top. The scene is set against a clear blue sky, and some trees are visible in the foreground and middle ground. The title text is overlaid on the upper portion of the image.

Historic Preservation Michael A. Tomlan, 2014-11-21 This well illustrated book offers an up to date synthesis of the field of historic preservation cast as a social campaign concerned with the condition treatment and use of the legacy of existing properties in the United States Drawing on a wide range of research experience and scholarship over the last fifty years it allows us to re think past and current ideas in preservation challenging readers to explore how their own interests lie within the cognitive framework of the activities taking place with people who care Who is involved is explored first in such a way as to explore why before examining what is deemed important After that the questions of when and how to proceed are given attention The major topics are introduced in an historical review through the mid 1980s after which the broad intellectual basis and fundamental legal framework is provided The economic shifts associated with major demographic changes are explored in tandem with responses of the preservation community A chapter is dedicated to the financial challenges and sources of revenue available in typical preservation projects and another chapter focuses on the manner in which seeing recording and interpreting information provides the context for an appropriate vision for the future In this regard it is made clear that not all green design alternatives are preservation sensitive The advocacy battles during the last few decades provide a number of short stories of the ethical battles regarding below ground and above ground historic resources and the eighth chapter attempts to explain why religion has been long held at arm s length in publicly supported preservation efforts when in fact it holds more potential to regenerate existing sites than any governmental program Historic and Archeological Preservation United States.
