Alcoholism is a real threat to the prevention of alcohol abuse and alcoholism among American blacks. Not only do they mirror the existing literature, they also break new theoretical and empirical ground. The first of the book's two sections addresses major models of black alcoholism and its consequences. The authors discuss the strengths and weaknesses of contemporary prevention efforts designed specifically for blacks, and they map out new directions for the future. The second section examines the prevention of alcoholism among specific subgroups of blacks, such as adolescents and women, the prevention and treatment of black alcoholism in the work place, and the role of religion as alcohol counselors and educators in the black community.
