ICD-9-CM is a classification system for medical diagnoses and procedures. It is used by healthcare providers to communicate patient information and for billing purposes. The ICD-9-CM code is a five-digit number that identifies a specific diagnosis or procedure.

The ICD-9-CM code is composed of five digits. The first digit represents the major category of the diagnosis or procedure. The second digit represents the subcategory. The third digit represents the specific diagnosis or procedure. The fourth and fifth digits represent the severity or extent of the diagnosis or procedure. For example, the ICD-9-CM code 250.01 represents "Diabetes mellitus, type 1, without complications".

The ICD-9-CM code is used by healthcare providers to communicate patient information and for billing purposes. It is a standard language for healthcare providers to use when discussing a patient's condition. The ICD-9-CM code is a key component of the medical record and is used to track the patient's health over time.
