

RIGHTS VS PRIVILEGES

Rights refer to entitlements determined by law and custom, while privileges refer to special advantages or opportunities granted by power, authority, or circumstance.

RIGHTS

Rights are legal or moral entitlements that individuals have by virtue of being human. Basic human rights safeguard and empower people serving as an anchor that cannot be tampered with.

Examples of rights include freedom of speech, fair voting procedures, and equitable legal proceedings - all crucial aspects that uphold society's integrity.

PRIVILEGES

Privileges are benefits or advantages provided to people based on their status or position. They may come from sources such as legislation, societal norms, and personal networks.

Examples of privileges include private education, personal assistants, access to the best parking lot, and (for children) rewards for good behavior in class.

Privileges Of Independence:

The Privileges of Independence John E. Crowley, 1993 Because the establishment of the United States required independence from a commercial empire historians have often identified the American Revolution with liberal political economy and a repudiation of Old World mercantilism But in The Privileges of Independence John Crowley argues that the colonies successful revolt did not mean they wished to end their privileged commercial dependence on Great Britain From the 1760s through the mid 1790s in fact Anglo American political economists grappled with the transition from a de jure to a de facto economic dependence of the new states on their former mother country Jacket flap
