River Soar In Old Photographs Britain In Old Photographs S:

The River Soar in Old Photographs Don Wix,1992 This addition to the Britain in Old Photographs series brings together a collection of black and white pictures spanning the late 19th and early 20th centuries Drawn from family albums local collections and professional photographers they show the way things were and how they have changed The British Journal of Photography ,1880 The Geography of Great Britain by George Long and George R. Porter ,1850* The Geography of Great Britain George Long,1850 Leicester Old and New William Kidd,1975 Hutchinson's Britain Beautiful Walter Hutchinson,1924 Paddle and Pub Gemma Bowes,2025-06-05 A unique travel guide celebrating traditional British pubs this book will take you to all the best watering holes you can reach by paddleboard kayak or canoe Hiking and cycling to pubs are already popular pastimes but the best way to reach those pubs beside rivers lakes canals and the coast is to paddle there by kayak canoe or paddleboard This lively and fun guide covers the best of British Plenty of paddle routes are featured from all over the UK usually with more than one pub to choose from Cruise down the Wester Ross shore of Scotland with mountains on one side the Isle of Skye on the other and a refreshing pint waiting for you at the end Paddle through a reclaimed industrial cityscape from Hackney Wick and stop for one of the capital s best canalside cocktails Or drift around the ribbon like bends of the Cuckmere meanders of the South Downs and finish with a crisp white wine Routes of varying lengths and difficulty through different types of scenery are included along with detailed practical information when to go where to hire a canoe kayak paddleboard parking where to camp for longer trips things to spot along the way and much more Packed with helpful maps and gorgeous photography this inspiring travel guide to the best of British pubs will ensure you have plenty of good beer and great food for every pub paddle Living with the Flood Samantha Paul, Kevin Colls, Henry Chapman,2015-11-30 The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more transitory activity as the riparian landscape in a wooded setting became a wetland within a more openly grazed environment The presence of potential built structures dating to the early Neolithic the early Bronze Age and the early Anglo Saxon periods provides some sense of continuity although the nature of these structures and the environmental context within which they were constructed was very different The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more transitory activity as the riparian landscape in a wooded setting became a wetland within a more openly grazed environment The presence of potential built structures dating to the early Neolithic the early Bronze Age and the early Anglo Saxon periods provides some sense of continuity although the nature of these structures and the environmental context within which they were constructed was very different The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more transitory activity as the riparian landscape in a wooded setting became a wetland within a more openly grazed environment The presence of potential built structures dating to the early
