Sheffield Steel:

Sheffield Steel and America Geoffrey Tweedale, 1987 The book provides an important contribution to the technological and commercial history of crucible and electric steelmaking by thoroughly examining its development in Sheffield and American centres such as Pittsburgh It also discusses cutlery saw and file manufacturing where the Americans quickly shed Sheffield's traditional technologies and with the help of superior marketing established a word lead by 1900 It is also shown however that this did not free the US from its dependence on Sheffield steel Sheffield's innovation in special steelmaking which began with the Hunstman crucible process in 1742 continued with a series of brilliant firsts which gave the world tool manganese silicon vanadium and stainless steel alloys Thus the US continued to draw from Sheffield know how even in the twentieth century a transfer of technology that was facilitated by the foundation of Sheffield's own subsidiary firms in America the history of which is recounted here

Skrabec, Jr.,2015-01-24 Throughout history the use and workmanship of metal has been closely associated with the very notion of civilization Never was this connection more apparent than during the Metallurgic Age which coincided with England's Victorian era and the Gilded Age in America. This era, covering essentially the 19th century, saw unprecedented advances as a passion for technology and learning fueled a period of discovery and of practical application of the sciences. This work explores in depth the connection between Victorian creativity and the advance of engineering. It examines this age of accelerated invention and the evolution of new fields such as metallurgy, automotive engineering, aerodynamics, and industrial arts. Numerous unsung inventors, many of whom lost one or more of the frequent patent battles that peppered the era, are remembered here along with the concept of the meta-invention. The result is a revealing look at how metallurgy permeated all areas of Victorian life and affected changes from the kitchen to the battlefield. The Indian and Eastern Engineer, 1919
