Pathways Of Change In Africa Crops Livestock Livelihoods In Mali Ethiopia Zimbabwe Hardcover:

Pathways of Change in Africa Ian Scoones, 2002 In the literature of sustainable development many have argued for the encouragement of mixed farming involving the integration of livestock and crops on one farm to meet the needs of small scale African farming systems Scoones and Wolmer both with the Environment Group at the Institute of Development Studies U of Sussex argue that behind this argument is the implicit or explicit assumption that mixed farming represents a stage in a normative evolutionary process towards an ideal They suggest that this view is mistaken and that mixed farming is only one of a range of possible pathways of change in agricultural systems They present case studies from Ethiopia Mali and Zimbabwe and analyze how social actors have varying access to resources This variance is often due to institutional arrangements that are too often ignored in discussions of mixed farming and therefore fail to take into account situations that could help development efforts to be more effectively targeted Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR

Africana Libraries Newsletter, 2000 Pathways of Change Ian Scoones, William Wolmer, 2002 Dynamics and Diversity Ian Scoones, 2010-09-23 Soils are critical to agriculture and in turn to food supply and livelihoods Sustainable management of soils is crucial for a large proportion of the population of Africa Contrary to many claims soil fertility is improved and managed successfully by small scale farmers there Careful studies from widely different areas reveal how closely bound up soil management is with complex social cultural and ecological factors requiring a far more subtly tuned approach to development policy and practice This work is a study of how the context of livelihood systems has to inform development policy and practice Pastoralism and Development in Africa Andy Catley, Jeremy Lind, Ian Scoones, 2013-05-07 Once again the Horn of Africa has been in the headlines And once again the news has been bad drought famine conflict hunger suffering and death The finger of blame has been pointed in numerous directions to the changing climate to environmental degradation to overpopulation to geopolitics and conflict to aid agency failures and more But it is not all disaster and catastrophe Many successful development efforts at the margins often remain hidden informal sometimes illegal and rarely in line with standard development prescriptions If we shift our gaze from the capital cities to the regional centres and their hinterlands then a very different perspective emerges These are the places where pastoralists live They have for centuries struggled with drought conflict and famine They are resourceful entrepreneurial and innovative peoples Yet they have been ignored and marginalised by the states that control their territory and the development agencies who are supposed to help them This book argues that while we should not ignore the profound difficulties of creating secure livelihoods in the Greater Horn of Africa there is much to be learned from development successes large and small This book will be of great interest to students and scholars with an interest in development studies and human geography with a particular emphasis on Africa It will also appeal to development policy makers and practitioners Agriculture and Ecosystem Resilience in Sub Saharan Africa Yazidhi Bamutaze, Samuel Kyamanywa, Bal Ram Singh, Gorettie

Nabanoga, Rattan Lal, 2019-05-22 This volume discusses emerging contexts of agricultural and ecosystem resilience in Sub Saharan Africa as well as contemporary technological advances that have influenced African livelihoods In six sections the book addresses the sustainable development goals to mitigate the negative impacts on agricultural productivity brought about by climate change in Africa Some of the challenges assessed include soil degradation land use changes natural resource mismanagement declining crop productivity and economic stagnation This book will be of interest to researchers NGOs and development organizations Section 1 focuses on climate risk management in tropical Africa Section 2 addresses the water ecosystem agriculture nexus and identifies the best strategies for sustainable water use Section 3 introduces Information Communication Technology ICT and how it can be used for ecosystem and human resilience to improve quality of life in communities Section 4 discusses the science and policies of transformative agriculture including challenges facing crop production and management Section 5 addresses landscape processes human security and governance of agro ecosystems Section 6 concludes the book with chapters uniquely covering the gender dynamics of agricultural ecosystem and livelihood resilience Adapting African Agriculture to Climate Change Walter Leal Filho, Anthony O. Esilaba, Karuturi P.C. Rao, Gummadi Sridhar, 2014-11-26 This book summarizes the evidence from different African countries about the local impacts of climate change and how farmers are coping with current climate risks The different contributors show how agricultural systems in developing countries are affected by climate changes and how communities prepare and adapt to these changes Risk and Social Change in an African Rural Economy John G. McPeak, Peter D. Little, Cheryl R. Doss, 2011-07-21 Pastoralists role in contemporary Africa typically goes underappreciated and misunderstood by development agencies external observers and policymakers Yet arid and semi arid lands ASAL which are used predominantly for extensive livestock grazing comprise nearly half of the continent's land mass while a substantial proportion of national economies are based on pastoralist activities Pastoralists use these drylands to generate income for themselves through the use of livestock and for the coffers of national trade and revenue agencies They are frequently among the continent's most contested and lawless regions providing sanctuary to armed rebel groups and exposing residents to widespread insecurity and destructive violence The continent's millions of pastoralists thus inhabit some of Africa's harshest and most remote but also most ecologically economically and politically important regions This study summarizes the findings of a multi year interdisciplinary research project in pastoral areas of Kenya and Ethiopia The cultures and ecology of these areas are described with a particular focus on the myriad risks that confront people living in these drylands and how these risks are often triggered by highly variable rainfall conditions The authors examine the markets used by residents of these areas to sell livestock and livestock products and purchase consumer goods before turning to an analysis of evolving livelihood strategies Furthermore they focus on how well being is conditioned upon access to livestock and access to the cash economy gender patterns within households and the history of development activities in the area The book concludes with a report on how these activities are assessed by people in the area and what activities they prioritize for the future Policy in pastoral areas is often formulated on the basis of assumptions and stereotypes without adequate empirical foundations This book provides evidence on livelihood strategies being followed in pastoral areas and investigates patterns in decision making and well being It indicates the importance of livestock to the livelihoods of people in these areas and identifies the critical and widespread importance of access to the cash economy concluding that future development activities need to be built on the foundation of the livestock economy instead of seeking to replace it

Farming Systems of the African Savanna A. Ker, International Development Research Centre (Canada), 1995 Farming Systems of the African Savanna A continent in crisis

Making a Living Elizabeth Francis, 2000 Livelihoods in rural Africa are changing to respond to disappearing job prospects falling agricultural output and collapsing infrastructure The responses to these challenges vary in different parts of Africa This book explains why

Crop-livestock Interaction in Sub-Saharan Africa John McIntire, Daniel Bourzat, Prabhu L. Pingali, 1992 This book is the result of a collaborative research effort between the World Bank and the International Livestock Centre for Africa It extends previous work on agricultural mechanization and the evolution of farming systems in Africa by seeking to answer a number of basic questions about the integration of crops and livestock in sub Saharan Africa Those questions include the role of mixed farming in promoting agricultural growth the appropriate points at which to encourage the use of animals as sources of farm power the contribution of animals to improving the poor fertility of African soils the efficacy of different methods to better livestock nutrition and the economic returns to incorporating livestock production on small farms While many individual studies have analyzed such issues in the past this book is the first comprehensive review of existing knowledge which offers general explanations of crop livestock relations with respect to both economic and technical features of African agriculture In doing so experimental evidence is carefully synthesized and examined in light of field visits to thirty three different sites through the major agroclimates of sub Saharan Africa The detailed empirical nature of the book permits specific conclusions to be drawn for different farming systems while its comparisons across those systems allow broad explanations of contrasting crop livestock interactions
