

Student Success for Men of Color in Community Colleges: A Review of Published Literature and Research, 1998–2012

Frank Harris, III and J. Luke Wood
San Diego State University

A substantial body of scholarship on men of color in postsecondary education has emerged since the late 1990s. Yet, only recently have scholars begun to pursue empirical insights about the status of men of color who attend community colleges. In an effort to inform future research, this article reviews the published scholarship on student success for men of color in community colleges. The 5 domains of African American male student success in community colleges proposed by Wood and Harris (2012) served as a conceptual framework for reviewing and discussing the published scholarship. Following the review of scholarship, knowledge gaps and implications for future research on men of color in community colleges are offered.

Keywords: men of color, community colleges, student success

Since the late 1990s, student success researchers have considered the experiences and outcomes of men who have been historically underrepresented and underserved in education (e.g., Cuyjet, 1997, 2006; Davis, 2003; Davis & Polite, 1999; Ferguson, 2000; Harper, 2006; Harris, Bensimon, & Bishop, 2010; Hilton, Wood, & Lewis, 2012; Noguera, 2003; Palmer & Strayhorn, 2008; Saenz & Ponjuan, 2009). A finding consistently reported across these studies is that African American and Latino men rank at or near the bottom on most indicators of student success, including enrollment, persistence, achievement, engagement, and attainment. For example, Harper (2006) noted that in 2002, Black men represented 4.3% of all students enrolled in postsecondary education—the same as they did in 1976. Similarly, Saenz and Ponjuan (2009) declared that Latino men were “vanishing” from the nation’s educational pipeline and articulated sociocultural factors that fostered this trend. Finally, a 2011 College Board report titled “The Educational Experiences of Young Men of Color” examined six pathways that students can take on their departure from high school: (1) enrollment in postsecondary education, (2) enlistment in the U.S. Armed Forces, (3) employment, (4) unemployment, (5) incarceration, and (6) death (Lee & Ransom, 2011). Data presented in the report show that men of color (MOC) are grossly overrepresented in the latter three of these pathways.

Although the aforementioned scholarship on MOC’s success in higher education has been illuminating in many respects, it has prioritized MOC at 4-year institutions, leaving many unanswered questions about those who attend community colleges, which is where most MOC who participate in postsecondary education are currently enrolled or begin their college careers (Beginning Postsecondary Students, 2009). Moreover, researchers have shown that the profile of community college men differs significantly from their 4-year counterparts, thus limiting the utility of research findings and models across institutional contexts (Bush & Bush, 2010; Wood, 2013).

Beyond the relatively little attention that has been paid by scholars to MOC in community colleges, trends in persistence, attainment, and transfer reveal significant disparities among these students, especially when compared with men from more advantaged backgrounds. For example, data from the Digest of Education Statistics (2010) indicated that 12% of Black,

Contemporary Perspectives on Early Childhood Curriculum Olivia Saracho, Bernard Spodek, 2002-06-01 Over the years educational scholars have proposed different conceptions of the curriculum It is as if each scholar researcher university educator and practitioner has developed her or his own personal definition Unfortunately there is no one single definition that everybody has agreed upon Table 1 presents a sample of these definitions A universal definition for curriculum may continue to be elusive and may even change through the years to address changes in the social forces and changes in related school goals Nonetheless the approach in curriculum development is consistent Curriculum developers establish goals develop experiences designate content and evaluate experiences and outcomes Most curriculum developers consistently use such terms as curriculum planning curriculum development curriculum implementation and curriculum evaluation and many others to describe curriculum related activities Unfortunately without a consistent definition of curriculum it is difficult for the curriculum developers to identify what it is that needs to be planned developed implemented or evaluated If curriculum developers rely on the curriculum experts definitions they will find that their definitions identify a product a program determine goals and objectives and learner experiences However its heterogeneity may be inspiring if curriculum developers rely on the components of each definition that depict the richness of the field which in turn can provide a foundation for contemporary content concepts and creativity A curriculum is an anthology of learning experiences conceived and arranged based on a program s educational goals and the community s social forces Each curriculum manifests an image of what children ought to be and become Biber 1984 p 303 grounded on the awareness of social values and a system that interprets those values into experiences for learners The concept of curriculum as a distinctive domain of study within education arose from the demand to arrange organize and translate such awareness into educational programs of study It integrates the historical study of the goals and content of schooling analyses of curriculum documents and analyses of the children s experiences in school The first formal curriculum text was published in 1918 Bobbit 1918 although in the United States contemporary curriculum study goes back to the early 1890 s when lead committees challenged the form and structure of public schooling Presently curriculum development is fundamental at all educational levels
