Saving Global Fisheries J. Samuel Barkin,Elizabeth R. DeSombre,2013 A proposal for a new global approach for fisheries focused on reducing fishing capacity and providing incentives for long term sustainability The Earth s oceans are overfished despite more than fifty years of cooperation among the world s fishing nations There are too many boats chasing too few fish In Saving Global Fisheries J Samuel Barkin and Elizabeth DeSombre analyze the problem of overfishing and offer a provocative proposal for a global regulatory and policy approach Existing patterns of international fisheries management try to limit the number of fish that can be caught while governments simultaneously subsidize increased fishing capacity focusing on fisheries as an industry to be developed rather than on fish as a resource to be conserved Regionally based international management means that protection in one area simply shifts fishing efforts to other species or regions Barkin and DeSombre argue that global rather than regional regulation is necessary for successful fisheries management and emphasize the need to reduce subsidies They propose an international system of individual transferable quotas that would give holders of permits an interest in the long term health of fish stocks and help create a sustainable level of fishing capacity globally

Unnatural Law David R. Boyd,2011-11-01 While governments assert that Canada is a world leader in sustainability Unnatural Law provides extensive evidence to refute this claim A comprehensive assessment of the strengths and weaknesses of Canadian environmental law the book provides a balanced critical examination of Canada s record focusing on laws and policies intended to protect water air land and biodiversity Three decades of environmental laws have produced progress in a number of important areas such as ozone depletion protected areas and some kinds of air and water pollution However Canada s overall record remains poor In this vital and timely study David Boyd explores the reasons why some laws and policies foster progress while others fail He ultimately concludes that the root cause of environmental degradation in industrialized nations is excessive consumption of resources Unnatural Law outlines the innovative changes in laws and policies that Canada must implement in order to respond to the ecological imperative of living within the Earth s limits The struggle for a sustainable future is one of the most daunting challenges facing humanity in the 21st century Everyone academics lawyers students policy makers and concerned citizens interested in the health of the Canadian and global environments will find Unnatural Law an invaluable source of information and insight For more information on Unnatural Law visit David Boyd s site www.unnaturallaw.com

Japan's International Fisheries Policy Roger D. Smith, 2014-09-19 Few nations rely upon the ocean as much as Japan for livelihood culture and transport The seas have long played a vital role for the Japanese helping to support the economic and social life of a nation that possesses few resources and little arable land and sustain a population that has nearly tripled in the last century Fish are a distinctive feature of the Japanese diet constituting nearly half of all animal protein consumed the highest rate in the world The industry itself has provided an impetus for coastal community growth and national economic development over the past century while fisheries have worked their way into Japanese culture and customs serving as a dominant symbol in traditional arts and folklore This book explores the overarching rationale that motivated Japanese international fisheries policy throughout the post war period until today highlighting the importance of international fisheries to Japan and the stature this resource has occupied as a national interest It provides a comparative view of Japanese foreign policy at various ocean conferences treaty negotiations bilateral diplomatic initiatives and other maritime relations that constitute ocean policy over half a century and investigates the domestic constituents of national policy Roger Smith argues that the rationale for international fisheries policy may be best viewed as deriving from Japan's unique defence strategy for its national interests comprehensive security Encompassing non military elements and most importantly defence of economic interests Japan's international fisheries policy provides an interesting case study of how comprehensive security is conceptualised and carried out Taking a broad view of Japan's international fisheries policies from 1945 to the present this book highlights the key trends in policy motives and means throughout the post war period As such it will be of great interest to students and scholars of Japanese studies international and environmental law resource management and international relations as well as to policy makers working in the field

Russia's Economic Transitions Nicolas Spulber, 2003-04-10 Russia's Economic Transitions examines the three major transformations that the country underwent from the early 1860s to 2000. The first transition under Tsarism involved the partial break up of the feudal framework of land ownership and the move toward capitalist relations. The second, following the Communist revolution of 1917, brought to power a system of state ownership and administration, a sui generis type of war economy, state capitalism, subjecting the economy's development to central commands. The third, started in the early 1990s and still unfolding, is aiming at reshaping the inherited economic fabric on the basis of private ownership. The three transitions originated within different settings but with a similar primary goal, namely, the changing of the economy's ownership pattern in the hopes of providing a better basis for subsequent development. The treatment's originality, impartiality, and historical breadth have cogent economic, social, and political relevance.
