Revolution And Pedagogy Interdisciplinary And Transnational Perspectives On Educational Foundations:

Revolution and Pedagogy E. Ewing, 2005-05-13 Revolution and Pedagogy explores the tensions between and within the processes of revolutionary pedagogical change and continuity Contributors examine conventional topics such as school policies and curricula as well as more non traditional pedagogies such as public celebrations of holidays participation in international exchange programs and the incarceration of political activists Making History in Iran Farzin

Vejdani, 2014-11-05 Iranian history was long told through a variety of stories and legend tribal lore and genealogies and tales of the prophets But in the late nineteenth century new institutions emerged to produce and circulate a coherent history that fundamentally reshaped these fragmented narratives and dynastic storylines Farzin Vejdani investigates this transformation to show how cultural institutions and a growing public sphere affected history writing and how in turn this writing defined Iranian nationalism Interactions between the state and a cross section of Iranian society scholars schoolteachers students intellectuals feminists and poets were crucial in shaping a new understanding of nation and history This enlightening book draws on previously unexamined primary sources including histories school curricula pedagogical materials periodicals and memoirs to demonstrate how the social locations of historians writ broadly influenced their interpretations of the past The relative autonomy of these historians had a direct bearing on whether history upheld the status quo or became an instrument for radical change and the writing of history became central to debates on social and political reform the role of women in society and the criteria for citizenship and nationality Ultimately this book traces how contending visions of Iranian history were increasingly unified as a centralized Iranian state emerged in the early twentieth century Separate Schools E.

Thomas Ewing, 2010-11-01 Starting in 1943 millions of children were separated into boys and girls schools in cities across the Soviet Union The government sought to reinforce gender roles in a wartime context and to strengthen discipline and order by separating boys and girls into different classrooms The program was a failure Discipline further deteriorated in boys schools and despite intentions to keep the education equal girls schools experienced increased perceptions of academic inferiority particularly in the subjects of math and science The restoration of coeducation in 1954 demonstrated the power of public opinion even in a dictatorship to influence school policies In the first full length study of the program Ewing examines this large scale experiment across the full cycle of deliberating advocating implementing experiencing criticizing and finally repudiating separate schools Looking at the encounters of pupils in classrooms policy objectives of communist leaders and growing opposition to separate schools among teachers and parents Ewing provides new insights into the last decade of Stalin s dictatorship A comparative analysis of the Soviet case with recent efforts in the United States and elsewhere raises important questions Based on extensive research that includes the archives of Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan Separate Schools will appeal to historians of Russia those interested in comparative education and educational history and specialists in gender studies The SAGE Handbook of Communication and Instruction Deanna L. Fassett, John T.

Rethinking Utopia David M. Bell,2017-01-20 Over five hundred years since it was named utopia remains a vital concept for understanding and challenging the world s we inhabit even in or rather because of the condition of post utopianism that supposedly permeates them In Rethinking Utopia David M Bell offers a diagnosis of the present through the lens of utopia and then by rethinking the concept through engagement with utopian studies a variety of radical theories and the need for decolonizing praxis shows how utopianism might work within against and beyond that which exists in order to provide us with hope for a better future He proposes paying a subversive fidelity to utopia in which its three constituent terms good eu place topos and no ou are rethought to assert the importance of immanent affective relations The volume engages with a variety of practices and forms to articulate such a utopianism including popular education critical pedagogy musical improvisation and utopian literature The problems as well as the possibilities of this utopianism are explored although the problems are often revealed to be possibilities provided they are subject to material challenge Rethinking Utopia offers a way of thinking about and perhaps realising utopia that helps overcome some of the binary oppositions structuring much thinking about the topic It allows utopia to be thought in terms of place and process affirmation and negation and the real and the not yet It engages with the spatial and affective turns in the social sciences without ever uncritically being subsumed by them and seeks to make connections to indigenous cosmologies It is a cautious careful critical work punctuated by both pessimism and hope and a refusal to accept the finality of this or any world

The Political Education of Democratus Brian W. Dotts, 2012-01-01 The radical Democratic Republican Societies that emerged during the 1790s not only challenged conventional interpretations of the civic republican tradition they also adopted Enlightenment principles in their advocacy for universal public education Brian W Dotts The Political Education of Democratus Negotiating Civic Virtue during the Early Republic shows that unlike mainstream educational philosophy of the period radical democrats supported universal political education as essential in protecting liberty and political equality
