She is surrounded by a large, diverse group of children of various ages, some sitting on the floor and others standing. The children are looking at the book with interest. times Alcott was an abolitionist and a feminist and remained unmarried throughout her life. She died from a stroke two days after her father died in Boston on March 6, 1888. Early life: Louisa May Alcott was born on November 29, 1832, in Germantown, which is now part of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on her father's 33rd birthday. She was the daughter of transcendentalist and educator Amos Bronson Alcott and social worker Abby May and the second of four daughters. Anna Bronson Alcott was the eldest, Elizabeth Sewall Alcott, and Abigail May Alcott were the two youngest. The family moved to Boston in 1834, where Alcott's father established an experimental school and joined the Transcendental Club with Ralph Waldo Emerson and Henry David Thoreau. Bronson Alcott's opinions on education and tough views on child rearing shaped young Alcott's mind with a desire to achieve perfection, a goal of the transcendentalists. His attitudes towards Alcott's wild and independent behavior and his inability to provide for his family created conflict between Bronson Alcott and his wife and daughters. In 1840, after several setbacks with the school, the Alcott family moved to a cottage on 2 acres (8,100 m²) of land situated along the Sudbury River in Concord, Massachusetts. The three years they spent at the rented Hosmer Cottage were described as idyllic. By 1843, the Alcott family moved along with six other members of the Consociate Family to the Utopian Fruitlands community for a brief interval. In 1843-1844, after the collapse of the Utopian Fruitlands, they moved on to rented rooms and finally, with Abigail May Alcott's inheritance and financial help from Emerson, they purchased a homestead in Concord. They moved into the home they named Hillside on April 1, 1845, but moved in 1852, selling to Nathaniel Hawthorne, who renamed it The Wayside. Moving 22 times in 30 years, the Alcotts returned to Concord once again in 1857 and moved into Orchard House, a two-story clapboard farmhouse, in the spring of 1858. Alcott's early education included lessons and from the naturalist Henry David Thoreau, where she was inspired to write Thoreau's Flute based on her time at Walden's Pond. Most of the education she received, thought came from her father, who was strict and believed in the sweetness of self-denial. She also received some instruction from writers and educators such as Ralph Waldo Emerson, Nathaniel Hawthorne, and Margaret Fuller, and Julia Ward Howe, all of whom were family friends. She later described these early years in a newspaper sketch entitled Transcendental Wild Oats. The sketch was reprinted in the volume Silver Pitchers (1876), which relates the family's experiment in plain living and high thinking at Fruitlands.
