questions about how emerging technologies might one day liberate or further harm communities of color that already face structural inequalities of racism. As reliance on computing technologies increases it is also important to address questions about racial bias in the design of digital platforms, labor inequalities in tech industries and digital surveillance on Black and Brown communities. This textbook provides a comprehensive introduction to the theory and research on race and digital media. Focusing on the experiences of people of color in the United States it explores the various ways that racism and white supremacy have shaped aspects of our digital world from the infrastructures and policies that support technological development to algorithms and the collection of data to the interfaces that shape engagement. Yet it also reveals how communities of color have deployed digital media in ways that expand the public sphere, contest the status quo and give voice to creativity and joy. Race and Digital Media provides an essential resource for students of communication, media technology and society. It shows how to make sense of our ever-changing digital media landscape in a way that centers the continued impact of institutionalized racism and the potential for anti-racist futures.

Male Sexuality Under Surveillance Graham Thompson, 2005-04. Male Sexuality under Surveillance is a lively, intelligent and expertly argued analysis of the construction of male sexuality in the business office. Graham Thompson interweaves three main threads: a historicized cultural analysis of the development of the modern business office from its beginnings in the early nineteenth century to the present day; a Foucauldian discussion of the office as the site of various disciplinary practices; and a queer theoretical discussion of the textualization of the gay male body as a device for producing a taxonomy of male-male relations. The combination of these themes produces a study that is fresh, insightful and provocative.

The Google Story David A. Vise, Mark Malseed, 2008. L'initiative du centre Saint Gobain pour la recherche en économie les plus grands spécialistes font le point sur trois déterminants de la croissance: la mise en œuvre du progrès technique, l'organisation de l'entreprise et l'organisation du travail. Un nouveau régime de croissance peut-il être conçu en fonction des réalités propres à l'Europe? Thomas par Thomas six contributions dressent le constat de la spécificité européenne et proposent une double lecture de son évolution. D'autres spécialistes commentent ces analyses. La comparaison des caractéristiques américaines et européennes montre que l'on peut redéfinir un modèle européen de croissance soutenue, favorable à l'emploi et à l'efficacité économique.
