The Management of Myths Anthony Paul Cohen, 1975

From Revolution to Rights in South Africa Steven L. Robins, 2010-11-18 The author argues for the continued importance of NGOs social movements and other civil society actors in creating new forms of citizenship and democracy in South Africa Critics of liberalism in Europe and North America argue that a stress on rights talk and identity politics has led to fragmentation individualisation and depoliticisation But are these developments really signs of the end of politics In the post colonial post apartheid neo liberal new South Africa poor and marginalised citizens continue to struggle for land housing and health care They must respond to uncertainty and radical contingencies on a daily basis This requires multiple strategies an engaged practised citizenship one that links the daily struggle to well organised mobilisation around claiming rights Robins argues for the continued importance of NGOs social movements and other civil society actors in creating new forms of citizenship and democracy He goes beyond the sanitised prescriptions of good governance so often touted by development agencies Instead he argues for a complex hybrid and ambiguous relationship between civil society and the state where new negotiations around citizenship emerge Steven L Robins is Professor of Social Anthropology in the University of Stellenbosch and editor of Limits to Liberation after Apartheid James Currey Southern Africa South Africa Botswana Namibia Lesotho Swaziland University of KwaZulu Natal Press PB

Applied Anthropology in Canada Edward J. Hedican,2008-01-01 Anthropologists are often reluctant to present their work relating to matters of a broad social context to the wider public even though many have much to say about a range of contemporary issues In this second edition of a classic work in the field Edward J Hedican takes stock of Anthropology s research on current indigenous affairs and offers an up to date assessment of Aboriginal issues in Canada from the perspective of applied Anthropology In his central thesis Hedican underlines Anthropology s opportunity to make a significant impact on the way Aboriginal issues are studied perceived and interpreted in Canada He contends that anthropologists must quit lingering on the periphery of debates concerning land claims and race relations and become more actively committed to the public good His study ranges over such challenging topics as advocacy roles in Aboriginal studies the ethics of applied research policy issues in community development the political context of the self government debate and the dilemma of Aboriginal status and identity in Canada Applied Anthropology in Canada is an impassioned call for a revitalized Anthropology one more directly attuned to the practical problems faced by First Nations peoples Hedican s focus on Aboriginal issues gives his work a strong contemporary relevance that bridges the gap between scholarly and public spheres

Essays for a Humanist ,1975

Aboriginal People and Other Canadians D. N. Collins,2001 Discusses a wide variety of issues in Native studies including social exclusion marginalization and identity justice equality and gender self help and empowerment in Aboriginal communities and in the cities and methodological and historiographical representations of social relationships

Leadership and Intercultural Dynamics Anthony H. Normore, John Collard, 2009-01-01 The work will explore issues related to educational leadership in various settings in the 21st century It will argue that the context for leadership within many nation states and international scenarios involves interaction between multiple and diverse social cultures A further proposition is that the dominant leadership theory and discourse in the past reflects forms of western hegemony and mono cultural assumptions drawn largely from the Anglo American worldview It will argue that such frameworks have limited validity in multicultural societies such as Australia Britain Canada Europe and the USA and with indigenous communities within such nations These societies contain significant populations which do not share the core values which inform established leadership practice and institutional paradigms in such nations The consequence can often be insensitivity towards non mainstream cultures inappropriate structures failed interventions and alienation of individuals from major institutions and traditions Another proposition is that as more developing nations increase in affluence and view education as a key economic strategy they become increasingly exposed to western discourses about leadership and management Whilst acknowledging that western traditions have much to offer there is a danger that this can involve forms of cultural imperialism whereby local traditions are ignored or subjugated There is a need for developing nations to recognise and value the traditions and practices from their own cultures and assess the extent to which they are compatible with borrowings from other nations Such processes require a sophisticated degree of reflective analysis to determine potential compatibilities and conflicts This is an alternative to unmediated cultural borrowing cloning and hybridization Western leadership scholars who work in such contexts have some responsibility to address this interaction instead of blithely offering practices and recipes from their metropolitan world views The final proposition is that there is a need to develop models and practices for intercultural dynamics which are responsive to intercultural complexity When these are thoroughly developed there will be clear implications for education The unique features of this book include It introduces a new theoretical perspective on leadership and intercultural issues which builds upon the previous work of cross cultural theorists from previous decades in educational leadership discourse It will explore the three primary contexts for leadership and intercultural interaction with indigenous communities in nation states with multicultural communities in nation states and with international education and development programs The book will draw upon a variety of authors from across the globe from Australia Britain Canada China Fiji Hong Kong Mexico Sweden and the United States The book will provide opportunities for the development of comparative and wide ranging perspectives within specific fields For instance students will be able to compare issues related to indigenous education in New Zealand Canada and Fiji Multicultural perspectives can be informed by experiences from Britain Canada and the US One of the strong chapters in the book is on A First Nation leadership program in the US International programs can be compared from contexts as diverse as Bellarus China and

Pacific Islands As such the book will supplement and challenge the mono cultural texts which tend to dominate leadership preparation programs in both developed and developing nations The intended audience for this book includes academics and students in the fields of education health public administration and community development in both the developed and developing world It will also appeal to practitioners in national state and local sites who operate in intercultural contexts
