Heroes, Saints, and Ordinary Morality

Andrew Michael Flescher,2003-11-25 Most of us are content to see ourselves as ordinary people unique in ways talented in others but still among the ranks of ordinary mortals Andrew Flescher probes our contented state by asking important questions How should ordinary people respond when others need our help whether the situation is a crisis or something less Do we have a responsibility an obligation to go that extra mile to act above and beyond the call of duty Or should we leave the braver responses to those who are somehow different than we are better somehow heroes or saints Traditional approaches to ethics have suggested there is a sharp distinction between ordinary people and those called heroes and saints between duties and acts of supererogation going beyond the expected Flescher seeks to undo these standard dichotomies by looking at the lives and actions of certain historical figures Holocaust rescuers Martin Luther King Jr Dorothy Day among others who appear to be extraordinary but were in fact ordinary people Heroes Saints and Ordinary Morality shifts the way we regard ourselves in relationship to those we admire from afar it asks us not only to admire but to emulate as well further it challenges us to actively seek the acquisition of virtue as seen in the lives of heroes and saints to learn from them a dynamic aspect of ethical behavior that goes beyond the mere avoidance of wrongdoing Andrew Flescher sets a stage where we need to think and act calling us to lead lives of self examination even if that should sometimes provoke discomfort He asks that we strive to emulate those we admire and therefore allow ourselves to grow morally and spiritually It is then that the individual develops a deeper altruistic sense of self a state that allows us to respond as the heroes of our own lives and therefore in the lives of others when times and circumstance demand that of us

Creativity as Sacrifice

James M. Watkins,2015-01-01 Theological interest in art is at a premium However theological engagement with art is often enacted without a clear sense of method This text argues for a theological methodology in engaging the arts and specifically the author puts forward a theological model for understanding human creativity in the light of Jesus sacrificial redemption In dialogue with theology philosophy psychology and art theory the author establishes the relevance and applicability of an incarnational and sacrificial model of human creativity Theological models also do more than provide a conceptual framework for theological inquiries They engage the imagination A theological model for human creativity is like an invitation to join in the creative vision God has for the world and to embody this vision in one s own creative work Therefore Creativity as Sacrifice does not merely articulate a conceptual framework for human creativity it also casts a vision for human life as a creative response to the gracious gifts of a creative God
