Alfred Hennetier Pierre Adolph, 2015-10-25 Perhaps the most fascinating provocative and intricately modelled of all images created during the 19th century craze for stereoscopic photography remain those created in Paris from around 1860 onwards and now known as Diableries or devilries 19th century France was renowned for its preoccupation with Satanism and death and these Diableries were a foremost populist expression of this dark undercurrent The first major and most famous series of Diableries was published by Adolph Block in 1868 this series subtitled A Trip To The Underworld ran to 72 images each depicting a scene from Hell Diableries A Trip To The Underworld is a long overdue celebration of this art The 72 images are first shown in their entirety with titling in French and English and then investigated in detailed close ups presenting this dioramic display of the Devil in all its Satanic glory
