Human development, heredity and evolution

Ryuichi Nishinakamura^{1,*} and Minoru Takasato²

ABSTRACT

From March 27–29 2017, the RIKEN Center for Developmental Biology held a symposium entitled ‘Towards Understanding Human Development, Heredity, and Evolution’ in Kobe, Japan. Recent advances in technologies including stem cell culture, live imaging, single-cell approaches, next-generation sequencing and genome editing have led to an expansion in our knowledge of human development. Organized by Yoshiya Kasaguchi, Mitinori Saitou, Mototsugu Eiraku, Tomoya Kitajima, Fumio Matsuzaki, Takashi Tsuji and Edith Heard, the symposium covered a broad range of topics including human germline development, epigenetics, organogenesis and evolution. This Meeting Review provides a summary of this timely and exciting symposium, which has convinced us that we are moving into the era of science targeted on humans.

KEY WORDS: Human development, Single-cell sequencing, Epigenetics, Organoid, Evolution

Introduction

Developmental biology research has a long history of studying model organisms such as the fruit fly Drosophila melanogaster, focusing mainly on early embryogenesis. One major revolution in the field came in the early 1990s, when knockout mouse technology led to a focus on embryogenesis and organ development in mammals. Now, recent advances in human embryonic stem cell (ESC) and induced pluripotent stem cell (iPSC) technology have enabled the generation of human organoids (miniature versions of human tissues and organs grown in culture) of a variety of tissues, which can at least partially mimic human diseases and potentially be used in drug discovery platforms. Genome editing is further accelerating these research activities. In addition, single-cell sequencing is becoming a powerful tool for developmental biology, revealing the states of individual cells during embryogenesis and hence allowing investigation of the dynamics of tissue and organ development in greater detail. This technology is now being applied to human embryos, as well as organoids generated in vitro. Human embryos are obtained and analyzed routinely at some institutions to study human development, not only for RNA sequencing but also for live imaging. These technological advances made for a very timely symposium, although the scope of this meeting was in fact much broader than our expectations. Rapid progress in next-generation sequencing has enabled comparative studies between humans and other mammals that are revealing the evolutionary processes that led to modern humans. Thus, we are now in the era of human developmental biology. In this review of the recent RIKEN Center for Developmental Biology (CDB) symposium ‘Towards Understanding Human Development, Heredity, and Evolution’ (Fig. 1), we summarize some of the prominent talks and take-home messages from the symposium, beginning with the investigation of early human embryogenesis and germline development, before considering talks focused on the epigenetic regulation of development, organogenesis and, finally, heredity and evolution of the human lineage.

Germline development and early embryogenesis

Mitinori Saitou (Kyoto University, Japan) previously succeeded in inducing mouse ESCs (mESCs) toward primordial germ cell (PGC) fate, generating cells that could contribute to spermatogenesis and oogenesis and to fertile offspring (Hayashi et al., 2011, 2012; Nakaki et al., 2013). He also reported PGC-like cells from human iPSCs (hiPSCs) (Sasaki et al., 2015). In his presentation, he discussed single-cell sequencing of pre- and post-implantation embryos of cynomolgus monkey, setting up a reference of normal early embryogenesis in non-human primates. This revealed that monkey ESCs and hiPSCs are transcriptionally similar to post-implantation late stage epiblasts, whereas mESCs correspond to the pre-implantation epiblasts (Nakamura et al., 2016). He further showed that primate PGCs do not appear in the epiblast but rather in the amnion as SOX17⁺ TFAP2C⁺ BLIMP1⁺ cells and then migrate toward the epiblast (Sasaki et al., 2016). The inductive roles of Wnt and BMP in PGC specification are conserved from mouse, but their source is different: Wnt is provided from cytotrophoblast and BMP4 from amnion. This illustrates important species-specific differences and highlights the limitations of the mouse as a model of human development. Reconciling this finding – that human PGCs (hPGCs) first appear in the amnion – with the fact that hPGCs can be induced from hiPSCs through an incipient mesoderm-like state will require further investigation. Azim Sarani (University of Cambridge, UK) also reported that the mechanisms of PGC specification between human and mice are not conserved. He showed that, unlike in mouse where SOX2, BLIMP1 (PRDM1) and PRDM14 are required for PGC specification, SOX17 and BLIMP1 could induce hPGCs from ESCs in vitro. Equal dosage of these two factors is important for hPGC specification; dominant expression of SOX17 over BLIMP1 produces aberrant cells with expression of some definitive endoderm genes. Furthermore, Sarani obtained human embryos to investigate the in vivo development of hPGCs. In these samples, human-specific ‘escapee’ loci that evade germline reprogramming could be identified, revealing potential for transgenerational epigenetic inheritance that may have phenotypic consequences (Tang et al., 2015).

Patrick Chinnery (University of Cambridge, UK) studies mitochondrial DNA (mtDNA) heteroplasmy within the germline. Heteroplasmic mtDNA mutations cause inherited metabolic diseases when the proportion of mutant mitochondria exceeds a critical threshold. Interestingly, the phenotype varies widely even within the same family depending on the level of mtDNA heteroplasmy. Such variation between individuals can be explained by the ‘bottleneck theory’, in which the number of
