Social Work, the Media and Public Relations (Routledge Revivals) Bob Franklin, Nigel Parton, 2014-06-17

Over the past few decades relationships between social workers and the media have become increasingly challenging Social workers feel aggrieved by media reporting of their profession and believe that journalists lack sufficient knowledge and experience of the social services to report matters adequately and sensitively whilst some journalists have urged social workers to adopt a more proactive public relations strategy This book first published in 1991 analyses the causes and consequences of the negative portrayal of social work within the media and considers various ways in which this image might be improved The authors consider a variety of developments during the 1990s designed to redress imbalances in media reporting and present a more accurate picture of social workers and the people with whom they work This title remains very relevant in light of the high profile cases related to the social service that continue to feature in the British press and will be of particular value to students and researchers
