Divided Peoples Christina Leza, 2019-11-05 The border region of the Sonoran Desert which spans southern Arizona in the United States and northern Sonora Mexico has attracted national and international attention But what is less discussed in national discourses is the impact of current border policies on the Native peoples of the region There are twenty six tribal nations recognized by the U S federal government in the southern border region and approximately eight groups of Indigenous peoples in the United States with historical ties to Mexico the Yaqui the O odham the Cocopah the Kumeyaay the Pai the Apaches the Tiwa Tigua and the Kickapoo Divided Peoples addresses the impact border policies have on traditional lands and the peoples who live there whether environmental degradation border patrol harassment or the disruption of traditional ceremonies Anthropologist Christina Leza shows how such policies affect the traditional cultural survival of Indigenous peoples along the border The author examines local interpretations and uses of international rights tools by Native activists counterdiscourse on the U S Mexico border and challenges faced by Indigenous border activists when communicating their issues to a broader public Through ethnographic research with grassroots Indigenous activists in the region the author reveals several layers of division the division of Indigenous peoples by the physical U S Mexico border the divisions that exist between Indigenous perspectives and mainstream U S perspectives regarding the border and the traditionalist nontraditionalist split among Indigenous nations within the United States Divided Peoples asks us to consider the possibilities for challenging settler colonialism both in sociopolitical movements and in scholarship about Indigenous peoples and lands Retold Stories, Untold Histories Joanna Ziarkowska, 2014-07-18 Retold Stories Untold Histories concentrates on how challenging questions concerning the nature of historical representation the formation of national ethnic identities and creative agendas are addressed in the diverse and inspiring writings of Maxine Hong Kingston and

Leslie Marmon Silko The rationale behind juxtaposing two writers coming from diverse cultural contexts originates in the fact that both Kingston and Silko share the experience of historical and cultural marginalization and more importantly devise similar methods of rendering it in creative writing Writing from the perspective of two distinct marginalized groups Kingston and Silko share the view that the official version of national history may be seen as a narrative of misrepresentation and the exclusion of people who either greatly contributed to the building of the country or occupied the territory of the present United States long before its creation In their texts both writers engage in a polemic against a history that using its legitimizing power as a scientific discipline produces and perpetuates stereotypical images of Chinese and Native Americans and more importantly eliminates the two groups from the process of constructing the national narratives of origins that monitor and control the borders of what constitutes American identity Despite apparent differences in cultural and historical contexts Kingston and Silko share an enthusiasm for employing unconventional tools and sources for offering creative reconstructions of a past which had been silenced or repressed

Lessons from an Indian Day School Adrea Lawrence, 2011-10-18 Clara D True and Clinton J Crandall teacher and superintendent for the Indian Day School of the Santa Clara Pueblo were typical agents in the campaign waged by the federal government to assimilate Native Americans into mainstream American society As the primary Office of Indian Affairs officials for the Pueblo True and Crandall administered the school and also served as de facto health officials demographers arbiters and legal consultants as well as the eyes and ears of the government Drawing upon an extensive correspondence between True and Crandall from 1902 to 1907 Adrea Lawrence provides an intimate look at the daily lives and challenges that the two educators faced as they worked with a diverse community of Tewa Indians and Hispanos Through this long overlooked correspondence Lawrence introduces us to two fascinating characters flawed but intent individuals charged with the task of carrying out the government's colonialist Indian education policy Through descriptions of such episodes as their disdain for older Indians suspicion of vaccination True and Crandall provide clear examples of the inherent contradictions in the federal government's culturally insensitive approach toward its Indian population Yet they were also great advocates for the Indians often stepping in to mediate in matters involving land and taxation The complex portrait of these educators that emerges is based not just on the letters but also on corresponding documents from Pueblo Indians periodicals legal cases statutes Indian Office circulars and anthropological studies conducted by both Native and non Native scholars Lawrence reveals the challenges federal employees faced as they tried to execute the federal policy of assimilation while dealing with educative issues relating to land disease citizenship and modes of education that confronted Santa Clara Pueblo and its neighbors Several recurring themes are traced through each chapter such as colonization as negotiation place as a participant True and Crandall's notions of good and bad Indians and the significance of the relationships among Pueblo Indians Hispanos and Anglos Simultaneously caring and condescending dedicated yet oblivious to cultural complexities True and Crandall in these letters offer a rare and nuanced look at the daily interactions between OIA employees and their charges It makes a unique contribution to both Native American and education history

Appeals in Modern Rhetoric M. Jimmie Killingsworth, 2005-09-26 Appeals in Modern Rhetoric An Ordinary Language Approach introduces students to current issues in rhetorical theory through an extended treatment of the rhetorical appeal a frequently used but rarely discussed concept at the core of rhetorical analysis and criticism Shunning the standard Aristotelian approach that treats ethos pathos and logos as modes of appeal M Jimmie Killingsworth uses common accessible language to explain the concept of the rhetorical appeal meaning the use of language to plead and to please The result is a practical and innovative guide to understanding how persuasion works that is suitable for graduate and undergraduate courses yet still addresses topics of current interest to specialists Supplementing the volume are practical and theoretical approaches to the construction and analysis of rhetorical messages and brief and readable examples from popular culture academic discourse politics and the verbal arts Killingsworth draws on close readings of primary texts in the field referencing theorists to clarify concepts while he decodes many of the basic theoretical constructs common to an understanding of identification Beginning with examples of the model of appeals in social criticism popular film and advertising he covers in subsequent chapters appeals to time place the body gender and race Additional chapters cover the use of common tropes and rhetorical narrative and each chapter begins with definitions of key concepts

American Indian Literature, Environmental Justice, and Ecocriticism Joni Adamson, 2001 Although much contemporary American Indian literature examines the relationship between humans and the land most Native authors do not set their work in the pristine wilderness celebrated by mainstream nature writers Instead they focus on settings such as reservations open pit mines and contested borderlands Drawing on her own teaching experience among Native Americans and on lessons learned from such recent scenes of confrontation as Chiapas and Black Mesa Joni Adamson explores why what counts as nature is often very different for multicultural writers and activist groups than it is for mainstream environmentalists This powerful book is one of the first to examine the intersections between literature and the environment from the perspective of the oppressions of race class gender and nature and the first to review American Indian literature from the standpoint of environmental justice and ecocriticism By examining such texts as Sherman Alexie's short stories and Leslie Marmon Silko's novel Almanac of the Dead Adamson contends that these works in addition to being literary are examples of ecological criticism that expand Euro American concepts of nature and place Adamson shows that when we begin exploring the differences that shape diverse cultural and literary representations of nature we discover the challenge they present to mainstream American culture environmentalism and literature By comparing the work of Native authors such as Simon Ortiz with that of environmental writers such as Edward Abbey she reveals opportunities for more multicultural conceptions of nature and the environment More than a work of literary criticism this is a book about the search to find ways to understand our cultural and historical differences and similarities in order to arrive at a better agreement of what the human role in nature is and should be It exposes the blind spots in early ecocriticism and shows the possibilities for building common ground a middle place where writers scholars teachers and environmentalists might come together to work for social and environmental change

Fretz, 2015-12-24 Climate Change across the Curriculum examines ways of thinking and conveying information about climate change across university curricula and within academic disciplines The contributors provide methods strategies rationales and theoretical justifications for teaching climate issues at the university level The content of this book aims to introduce climate change to classes outside of the sciences as it will take a wide range of disciplines broader institutional thinking and experimentation to fully engage university resources and knowledge toward the mitigation of fossil fuel consumption and adaptation to the negative consequences of climate change Climate Change across the Curriculum encourages professors to engage salient aspects of their academic disciplines to the study of climate issues in the classroom as well as sample theories practices and resources from a wide range of academic disciplines outside of their own areas of specialization The contributors ask what role will higher education play in addressing environmental challenges and producing students who become professionals who accomplish work that solves these problems
