Recoilless Anti-Tank Weapons

by John Weeks

When the first British Mark 1 tanks waddled out of the gates on a September morning in 1916 they started a completely new phase of war — the tank war. But they also started another war, the Anti-Tank war, and it has been going on ever since. For those first tanks particularly threatened the enemy infantry, and ever since the infantry have been hitting back as hard as they can, using their own specialised weapons, and their own techniques.

The first reactions to tanks were along conventional lines, using larger types of rifle calibre weapons, and these will be dealt with in a separate Profile publication. In 1939 such weapons were still in vogue, although it was beginning to be realised that they did not fulfil all that was required of them, and so carry and fire them was becoming a burden for the man unfortunate enough to be given the job. The principle of these weapons was to punch a hole in the armour of the tank by shooting a high velocity bullet containing a hard core, made usually from tungsten or a similar metal. This is still considered the best way to defeat armour, but it requires plenty of weight in the bullet, and plenty of velocity, both of which automatically demand a heavy gun and on firing give it plenty of recoil. It wasn't long before the anti-tank rifles of 1941 found that they could no longer cope. Their bullets literally bounced off the armour of the German Mark III's and the British Matildas and were often not even noticed by the crew inside. Carrying these ineffective rifles was a burden, and firing them a matter of great bravery and heroism.

The next step was to employ small guns, literally scaled down artillery pieces, and these served splendidly, but they were not the equipment of the front-line soldier, they came up towed by vehicles, or carried on vehicles, and the individual man had
