Northrop,2016-06-08 Drawing on extensive research in the archives of Russia and Uzbekistan Douglas Northrop here reconstructs the turbulent history of a Soviet campaign that sought to end the seclusion of Muslim women In Uzbekistan it focused above all on a massive effort to eliminate the heavy horsehair and cotton veils worn by many women and girls This campaign against the veil was in Northrop s view emblematic of the larger Soviet attempt to bring the proletarian revolution to Muslim Central Asia a region Bolsheviks saw as primitive and backward The Soviets focused on women and the family in an effort to forge a new liberated social order This unveiling campaign however took place in the context of a half century of Russian colonization and the long standing suspicion of rural Muslim peasants toward an urban colonial state Widespread resistance to the idea of unveiling quickly appeared and developed into a broader anti Soviet animosity among Uzbeks of both sexes Over the next quarter century a bitter and often violent confrontation ensued with battles being waged over indigenous practices of veiling and seclusion New local and national identities coalesced around these very practices that had been placed under attack Veils became powerful anticolonial symbols for the Uzbek nation as well as important markers of Muslim propriety Bolshevik leaders who had seen this campaign as an excellent way to enlist allies while proving their own European credentials as enlightened reformers thus inadvertently strengthened the seclusion of Uzbek women precisely the reverse of what they set out to do Northrop s fascinating and evocative book shows both the fluidity of Central Asian cultural practices and the real limits that existed on Stalinist authority even during the ostensibly totalitarian 1930s The Canwell Files M. Kienholz,2012 particular individual chapters extend the geographic coverage of the book beyond Russia itself to examine women and gender relations in the Soviet East Tatarstan Central Asia Kazakhstan Tajikistan and Uzbekistan and the Baltic States Estonia Latvia and Lithuania Within the boundaries of the Russian Federation the scope moves beyond the typically studied urban centres of Moscow and St Petersburg to examine the regions Krasnodar Novosibirsk rural societies and village life Its chapters examine the construction of gender identities and shifts in gender roles during the twentieth century as well as the changing status and roles of women vis a vis men in Soviet political institutions the workplace and society more generally This volume draws on a broad range of disciplinary and methodological approaches currently being employed in the academic field of Russian studies The origins of the individual contributions can be identified in a range of conventional subject disciplines history literature sociology political science cultural studies but the chapters also adopt a cross and inter disciplinary approach to the topic of study This handbook therefore builds on and extends the foundations of Russian women s and gender studies as it has emerged and developed in recent decades and demonstrate the international indeed global reach of such research
