Archaeomineralogy George Rapp, 2009-02-07 Archaeomineralogy provides a wealth of information for mineralogists geologists and archaeologists involved in archaeometric studies The first edition was very well received and praised for its systematic description of the rocks and minerals used throughout the world by our ancestors and for its excellent list of over 900 references providing easy access to the fields of archaeomineralogy and geoarchaeology This second edition of Archaeomineralogy takes an updated and expanded look at the human use of rocks and minerals from the Paleolithic through to the 18th century CE It retains the structure and main themes of the original but has been revised and expanded with more than 200 new references within the text a bibliography of additional references not included in the text a dozen new figures drawings and photos coverage of many additional important mineral rock and gem materials a broader geographic scope particularly but not limited to Eastern Europe and a more thorough review of early contributions to archaeomineralogy especially those of Agricola From reviews of the first edition crammed full of useful information is well balanced using both new and Old World examples of the archaeomaterials described It also provides a broad but of necessity all too brief overview of the geological raw materials used in antiquity Geoscientist provides much interesting discussion of how particular names came to be employed by archaeologists working in different regions of the world much to offer for any geologist or archaeologist interested in minerals and rocks and how they have been used in the past Mineralium Deposita a gem of a book its strength is that it is encyclopedic in content if not in layout draws on a wealth of field experience and almost every sentence contains a nugget of information The Holocene Oceanography and Marine Biology R. The Global Lives of Things Anne Gerritsen, Giorgio Riello, 2015-11-19 The Global Lives of Things considers the ways in which things ranging from commodities to works of art and precious materials participated in the shaping of global connections in the period 1400-1800 By focusing on the material exchange between Asia Europe the Americas and Australia this volume traces the movements of objects through human networks of commerce colonialism and consumption It argues that material objects mediated between the forces of global economic exchange and the constantly changing identities of individuals as they were drawn into global circuits It proposes a reconceptualization of early modern global history in the light of its material culture by asking the question what can we learn about the early modern world by studying its objects This exciting new collection draws together the latest scholarship in the study of material culture and offers students a critique and explanation of the notion of commodity and a reinterpretation of the meaning of exchange It engages with the concepts of proto globalization the first global age and commodities consumption Divided into three parts the volume considers in Part One Objects of Global Knowledge in Part Two Objects of Global Connections and finally in Part Three Objects of Global Consumption The collection concludes with afterwords from three of the leading historians in the field Maxine Berg Suraiya Faruqi and Paula Findlen who offer their critical view of the methodologies and themes considered in the book and place its arguments within the wider field of scholarship Extensively illustrated and with chapters examining case studies from Northern Europe to China and Australia this book will be essential reading for students of global history
