

A photograph of two men standing in a kitchen or food service area. The man on the left is wearing a white t-shirt, dark cargo pants, and a black baseball cap. The man on the right is wearing a light yellow t-shirt and blue jeans, and is holding a black microphone. In the background, there are menu boards and kitchen equipment. A large white text overlay is centered over the image.

The Growth of Government James B. Kau, Paul H. Rubin, 2001 Theories of the size of government focus on either the demand for government or the supply of tax revenues Demand side theories such as those of Peltzman Meltzer and Richard Husted and Kenny and Lott and Kenny are essentially political theories They emphasize the role of voters or interest groups in expanding government Supply side theories such as those of Kau and Rubin Baumol West and Ferris and West emphasize the ability of government to collect taxes In this paper we combine both demand and supply side theories For demand we use the Poole Rosenthal time series data on the ideology of Congress on the theory that all political forces must ultimately express themselves in voting which is measured by ideology For supply we use the Kau Rubin measures of the ability of government to collect taxes as a function of the deadweight costs of tax collection and ability of individuals to hide revenues We find that female labor force participation and the associated ability to tax female productivity is the most important factor associated with government and it alone explains about 60% of the actual growth of government The ideology of the Senate is also significant but has a small effect This paper may be the first to examine the influence of ideology on the time path of a policy other research examining ideology including ours has been cross sectional Further research on the role of ideology in changing policies over time is clearly warranted

The Great Cat Massacre - A History of Britain in 100 Mistakes Gareth Rubin, 2014-05-08 In 1914 a train pulled into a provincial British railway station The porter a curious chap asked the regiment of soldiers where they were from Ross shire one called down but the porter heard Russia And so began a rumour that led to Germany losing the First World War Often the history we learn at school is only half the story We hear of heroic deeds and visionary leaders but we never hear about the people who turned up late for court and thereby changed the law or who stood in the wrong queue at university and accidentally won a Nobel Prize The Great Cat Massacre A History of Britain in 100 Mistakes demonstrates that the nation is as much a product of error as design

Through chapters on religion law culture war science and politics it reveals such things as how an edict from Pope Gregory IX helped spread the Black Death how the sister of cricketer John Willes invented overarm bowling and how had a letter not been lost Disraeli might never have become prime minister This book is history told through human failings schoolboy errors bad luck and extraordinary consequences a history of mishearing misdiagnosis and misinterpretation a history that you won't find in the textbooks
