Health Promotion: A Psychosocial Approach Christine Stephens, 2008-10-16 Stephens important and timely book provides an urgently needed and insightful synthesis of the previously fragmented field of community health psychology A wide range of case material from both rich and poor countries is framed within a skilfully articulated set of debates around core issues of theory practice research and ethics This text should be compulsory reading for all practitioners and students of health promotion Professor Catherine Campbell Health Community and Development Group London School of Economics Can the health of individuals be improved through community health programmes How can community health promotion programmes be more effective How is health awareness measured and evaluated In recent years health promoters have focused their attention not just on individual lifestyle change but on daily social and physical conditions that surround the individual. They are now looking towards lifestyle change based on community or socially based interventions. This book argues for the importance of theoretical explanations that inform investigations of the social context of daily life, the social relations that affect opportunities for healthy lives and the needs of communities. Examining theories from a critical and values oriented perspective, it looks at current theories of health and health promotion and discusses why health inequalities exist. The book includes a practical grounding using examples of community health promotion practice such as community arts and local community models based on material and research from Britain, New Zealand, Canada, the USA and South America. The media's role in health promotion is also investigated, drawing on current media theory and examining media representation and the public's interpretative response. Issues surrounding the evaluation of health promotion programmes are also discussed. Health Promotion: A Psychosocial Approach provides a critical and theoretical basis for practice in social and community approaches to health promotion. It is key reading for postgraduate students of health psychology or community psychology as well as qualified practitioners in public health areas who are developing theory based community programmes.

Emerging Theories in Health Promotion Practice and Research Ralph J. DiClemente, Richard Crosby, Michelle C. Kegler, 2002-10-15. Having so many theories put together thoughtfully proximally in a single book will help the field come to grips with what the role is of theories as we go forward and address the individual actions and societal and community influencers of individual action that promote healthy behaviors. Jim Marks, director National Center for Chronic Disease Prevention and Health Promotion, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. New and longstanding threats to public health such as violence, drug misuse, HIV/AIDS and homelessness are creating an ever greater demand for innovative theories that are responsive to the changes in the larger social environment. This important work is designed to fill the demand by assembling a careful selection of new and emerging health promotion theories into a single volume written with an emphasis on practical application of theory to health promotion and health education programs.

Health Behaviour and Health Promotion in a Public Health Psychology Thomas von Lengerke, 2001. Health psychology is frequently described as behaviour oriented, public health as system oriented. This study examines how political participation and health behaviour of individuals on one hand and system behaviour in terms of healthy policy on the other may represent common issues to the two fields. Theoretically it refers to social ecology and health promotion approaches such as community psychology and WHO's Ottawa Charter. Empirically data gathered within the EU Biomed2 Project MAREPS in population and policymaker surveys in Belgium, Finland, Germany, the Netherlands, Spain and Switzerland are analysed. Besides political participation results relate to breast cancer early detection, smoking prevention and physical activity promotion. It is concluded that the co-production of health by policymakers and populations calls for analysis and evaluation of contextual factors for health behaviour and multilevel health promotion action within a public health psychology. The
