

HP1000 – Psychology Core Concepts Chapter 1 Notes

Chapter-opening problem: How would psychology test the claim that sugar makes children hyperactive?
- Question that should be answered by the end of the chapter (Self-note: testing the effect of sugar on the behavioural outcome of hyperactivity?)

1.1 Key Question – What is Psychology and What is It NOT?

1.1 Core Concept – Psychology is a broad field, with many specialties, but fundamentally psychology is the science of behaviour and mental processes.

Internal mental processes (observed indirectly) – e.g. thinking, feeling and desiring

External observable behaviours – e.g. talking, smiling and running

Scientific component of psychology – the science of psychology is based on objective, verifiable evidence, not just opinions of experts and authorities

Three ways of doing psychology:

1. Experimental/Research Psychologists – Psychologists who do research on basic psychological processes – as contrasted with applied psychologists.
2. Teachers of Psychology – Psychologists whose primary job is teaching, typically in high schools, colleges, and universities.
3. Applied Psychologists – Psychologists who use the knowledge developed by experimental psychologists to solve human problems.

Applied psychological specialties – Industrial and Organizational (I/O), Sports, School, Clinical and Counseling, Forensic, Environmental

Psychology is not psychiatry – Virtually all psychiatrists, but only some psychologists, treat mental disorders – and there the resemblance ends. Psychiatry is a medical specialty, not part of psychology at all. Psychiatrists view patients from a medical perspective, psychologists view people from a psychological perspective. E.g., clinical and counseling psychologists are likely to view the people they are helping as clients rather than patients.

Pseudo-psychology – Erroneous assertions or practices set forth as being scientific psychology.

Six Critical Thinking Skills that should be asked when confronting new ideas:

1. What is the source?
2. Is the claim reasonable or extreme?
3. What is the evidence? - Anecdotal evidence is not scientific evidence
4. Could bias contaminate the conclusion? - E.g., emotional bias, confirmation bias
5. Does the reasoning avoid common fallacies?
6. Does the issue require multiple perspectives? E.g., psychological, economic, sociological perspectives
