Puerto Rico Hurricane Georges Sept 1998 The Presidents Long Term Recovery Action Plan:

Introduction to Emergency Management George Haddow, Jane Bullock, Damon Coppola, 2010-10-12 Introduction to Emergency Management Fourth Edition offers a practical guide to the discipline of emergency management. It focuses on the domestic emergency management system of the United States, highlighting the lessons and emerging trends that are applicable to emergency management systems in other parts of the world. The book begins by tracing the historical development of emergency management from the 1800s to the present world of homeland security. It then discusses the hazards faced by emergency management and the methods of assessing hazard risk, the function of mitigation, and the strategies and programs emergency management or other disciplines use to reduce the impact of disasters and emergency management preparedness. The book also covers the importance of communication in the emergency management of the twenty-first century, the functions and processes of disaster response, government and voluntary programs aimed at helping people and communities rebuild in the aftermath of a disaster, and international emergency management. It also addresses the impact of September 11, 2001, on traditional perceptions of emergency management and emergency management in the post-9/11 post-Katrina environment. Expanded coverage of risk management. Enhanced coverage of disaster communications, including social networking sites like Twitter. More material on mitigation of disasters. Up-to-date information on the role of FEMA in the Obama administration. The President's Long-term Recovery Action Plan United States. Federal Emergency Management Agency, 1999

Planning Ahead Association of State Floodplain Managers. Conference, 2000 Puerto Rico, Hurricane Georges, September 1998, 2000-07 Hurricane Georges struck Puerto Rico, PR, on Sep 21, 1998. Storm-related winds, flooding, mudslides caused billions of dollars in damages, economic losses. The Fed Govt was quick to respond to PR's request for assistance, but it will take years for communities, businesses to fully recover. This Action Plan captures the initial recovery assistance that the Fed Govt has provided in support of PR's long-term recovery effort, as well as a series of actions to facilitate the long-term recovery process It includes 57 specific actions that Fed Agencies are implementing to facilitate a well coordinated rapid recovery Illustrated Official Congressional Record Impeachment Set ,1999 Forthcoming Books Rose Arny,2000

Federal Emergency Management Agency,2000 Building Performance Assessment Report Federal Emergency Management Agency,2013-04-26 On the evening of September 21 1998 Hurricane Georges made landfall on Puerto Rico s east coast as a strong Category 2 hurricane It traveled directly over the interior of the island mainly in an east west direction and passed off Puerto Rico s west coast on September 22 Puerto Rico had not experienced a hurricane of this magnitude since Hurricane Hugo a devastating Category 3 hurricane that passed over the northeast corner of Puerto Rico in a southeast to northwest direction in September 1989 On September 30 the Federal Emergency Management Agency s FEMA Mitigation Directorate deployed a Building Performance Assessment Team BPAT to Puerto Rico to assess damages caused by Hurricane Georges The team included architects engineers planners insurance specialists and floodplain management specialists The BPAT s mission was to assess the performance of buildings and other structures throughout Puerto Rico and make recommendations for improving building performance in future events After an aerial assessment of the island the BPAT conducted field investigations in selected areas affected by the storm The field investigations of significantly damaged areas centered on the performance of single family residential home construction Isolated examples of success and failure in commercial buildings primarily building envelope issues in high rise buildings and several essential facilities observed during field investigations were also documented Commercial buildings were not investigated for compliance with current structural seismic guidelines One and two family residential buildings however were investigated for their ability to sustain a seismic event Seismic resistance of nonstructural elements was also observed It is important to note that wind speeds experienced on the island were not of the strength to test the design of Puerto Rico s buildings A more significant wind event striking Puerto Rico would likely have resulted in even more failures than were observed. A large number of residential buildings in Puerto Rico experienced structural damage from the high winds of Hurricane Georges. The BPAT concluded that while not all of the damage caused by Hurricane Georges could have been prevented, a significant amount could have been avoided if more buildings had been constructed to Puerto Rico's existing Planning Regulation 7 building code. Additional damage could have been avoided if more buildings had been designed and constructed to current codes and regulations that address flood wind and seismic loads. Although the BPAT observed several examples of successful mitigation implementation, many buildings unfortunately received too little attention to mitigation. If effective mitigation efforts had been implemented more extensively in the design and construction of buildings, the widespread devastation of the hurricane would have been substantially reduced.

Developing Recovery Options for Puerto Rico's Economic and Disaster Recovery Plan Rand

Corporation, 2020-10-31. After Hurricanes Irma and Maria caused widespread destruction across the U.S. Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, FEMA tasked the Homeland Security Operational Analysis Center (HSOAC) to work with the government of Puerto Rico, federal agencies, and other stakeholders to write a congressionally mandated economic and disaster recovery plan. This report summarizes HSOAC's strategic planning process to support the government of Puerto Rico in its development of the recovery plan. The HSOAC team developed nearly 300 potential recovery actions, courses of action that Puerto Rico could take to repair damage from the hurricanes and address longer-term economic recovery needs. The courses of action delineate potential activities, policies, programs, and strategies designed to further the goals prioritized by the government of Puerto Rico and other stakeholders. Each individual course of action describes an approach to addressing a problem associated with hurricane damage or with a preexisting condition that inhibits economic recovery. To develop the courses of action, the HSOAC team aligned 12 teams with the FEMA sectors supporting the National Disaster Recovery Framework, ranging from water to housing. For each course of action, the team estimated the costs that would likely be incurred and identified potential sources of funding for implementation. The extent of the hurricane damage combined with the preexisting economic challenges meant that the recovery actions identified covered every aspect of a modern economy. The hundreds of courses of action represent complex actions that need to be understood in context with how they redress these challenges with insights into how they connect with the key interests of inclusiveness and innovation, what their contributions will be toward meeting the strategic objectives that the governor of Puerto Rico identified, and their impact on the total cost of the plan. To help the government of Puerto Rico select a cohesive and effective set of courses of action for its recovery plan, the HSOAC team bundled these courses of action into portfolios and developed a unique decision support tool to summarize and synthesize possible options. Ultimately, the analysis and support provided by the HSOAC team facilitated the governor's final decision on which courses of action and portfolios to select, but neither HSOAC nor the decision support engagements exclusively determined the content of the final recovery plan.
