

La pulsión respiratoria: un olvido en psicoanálisis

01/07/2004- Por Alfredo Eidelsztein

El que un elemento que existe no figure en una serie o lista que incluye otros de su tipo no implica un olvido. Puede tratarse del caso en que la lógica mediante la cual tal serie se establece no requiere su inclusión; pero todo indica que, al menos, en aquella, restringida, de las cuatro pulsiones -oral, anal, escópica e invocante- falta la respiratoria.

El que un elemento que existe no figure en una serie o lista que incluye otros de su tipo no implica un olvido. Puede tratarse del caso en que la lógica mediante la cual tal serie se establece no requiera su inclusión; pero todo indica que, al menos, en aquella, restringida, de las cuatro pulsiones -oral, anal, escópica e invocante- falta la respiratoria. Respecto de la serie completa, si se trataría necesariamente de una omisión, pero en lo que hace a las pulsiones en psicoanálisis, tal serie no puede ser establecida.

No hay en absoluto acuerdo sobre el tema, ni entre los grandes autores ni, en especial respecto de S. Freud y J. Lacan, dentro de cada obra. De hecho, ni siquiera queda claro cuántos y cuáles son los sistemas pulsionales, menos sus relaciones de inclusión o exclusión - ¿las pulsiones de vida y de muerte son de la misma índole que la oral, anal, escópica e invocante? Tampoco es posible, sin hacer salvajes e impropias homogenizaciones, equiparar las pulsiones establecidas en los distintos momentos de elaboración teórica de un mismo autor o establecer cuáles son "las mismas pulsiones" entre diversos autores.

Para considerar tan sólo un ejemplo, pero que puede estimarse paradigmático al respecto, la pulsión de muerte tal como es concebida por S. Freud -en términos de un más allá del principio del placer- no se asemeja en absoluto a la pulsión de muerte según M. Klein -aquella cuyo exceso en el momento de nacer determina su proyección sobre el objeto- ni con la pulsión de muerte según J. Lacan -quien la concibe como el automatismo de repetición causado por el propio funcionamiento de la cadena significativa-.

¿Y respecto del concepto de pulsión en sí mismo? Tampoco hay acuerdo ni en el psicoanálisis en general, ni internamente en la obra de los autores que funcionan como referentes de la comunidad analítica.

Tomando en cuenta todos estos argumentos, se hace evidente que es muy difícil poder sostener que en "la serie restringida" de las pulsiones se ha olvidado incluir a la pulsión respiratoria, ya que la utilización de este conjunto de cuatro pulsiones, si bien es aceptado por una gran parte de la comunidad analítica lacaniana, no implica la resolución de los problemas teóricos, tales como los planteados por las siguientes preguntas: ¿qué se entiende por pulsión en psicoanálisis?; ¿cuántas y cuáles son? y ¿con qué lógica se establece una serie de pulsiones? Todos sabemos que las respuestas dependen de qué texto de S. Freud, M. Klein o J. Lacan se esté tomando en cuenta, aunque sea sin saberlo. Más aún: según lo sostenido como concepto de pulsión, se puede deducir cuál es el autor y el texto que se privilegia en detrimento de otros.

En este problema, la flecha del tiempo no resuelve nada. Si se construye una serie en la que los textos de los autores sean considerados fundamentalmente por el año de su escritura o publicación -algo que no es viable con los Escritos de Lacan, dada su manifiesta intención de alterar el orden cronológico de sus textos, y donde, por ejemplo, una introducción puede ubicarse al final del texto introducido-, su representación sería aproximadamente esta:
