Steen, 2012-12-06 Mathematics today is approaching a state of crisis. As the demands of science and society for mathematical literacy increase, the percentage of American college students intending to major in mathematics plummets and achievement scores of entering college students continue their unremitting decline. As research in core mathematics reaches unprecedented heights of power and sophistication, the growth of diverse applied specialties threatens to fragment mathematics into distinct and frequently hostile mathematical sciences. These crises in mathematics presage difficulties for science and engineering and alarms are beginning to sound in the scientific and even in the political communities. Citing a trend towards virtual scientific and technological illiteracy and a shrinking of our national commitment to excellence in science, mathematics and technology, a recent study conducted for the President by the U.S. National Science Foundation and Department of Education warns of serious impending shortcomings in public understanding of science. Today people in a wide range of non-scientific professions must have a greater understanding of technology than at any time in our history. Yet our educational system does not now provide such understanding. The study goes on to conclude that present trends pose great risk of manpower shortages in the mathematical and engineering sciences. The pool from which our future scientific and engineering personnel can be drawn is in danger of becoming smaller even as the need for such personnel is increasing. It is time to take a serious look at mathematics tomorrow.

Nothing can seem more natural to a mathematician in this country than to honor Gail Young. Gail embodies all the qualities that a mathematician should possess. He is an active and effective research mathematician having written over sixty papers in topology, n-dimensional analysis, complex variables and miscellanea. He is an outstanding expositor as his fine book Topology written with J. G. Hocking Addison-Wesley 1961 amply demonstrates. He has a superlative record in public office of outstanding unstinting service to the mathematical community and to the cause of education. But what makes Gail unique and special is that throughout all aspects of his distinguished career he has emphasized human values in everything he has done In touching the lives of so many of us he has advanced the entire profession Deservedly he has innumerable friends in the mathematical community the academic community and beyond International Series of Monographs on Pure and Applied Biology ,1965 Indian Journal of Pure & Applied Physics ,1996 A History of Australian Literature, Pure and Applied Henry Mackenzie Green,1961
