American Leaders and Heroes: United States History Wilbur F. Gordy,2016-08-13 In teaching history to boys and girls from ten to twelve years old simple material should be used Children of that age like action They crave the dramatic the picturesque the concrete the personal When they read about Daniel Boone or Abraham Lincoln they do far more than admire their hero By a mysterious sympathetic process they so identify themselves with him as to feel that what they see in him is possible for them Herein is suggested the ethical value of history But such ethical stimulus be it noted can come only in so far as actions are translated into the thoughts and feelings embodied in the actions In this process of passing from deeds to the hearts and heads of the doers the image forming power plays a leading part Therefore a special effort should be made to train the sensuous imagination by furnishing picturesque and dramatic incidents and then so skilfully presenting them that the children may get living pictures This I have endeavored to do in the preparation of this historical reader by making prominent the personal traits of the heroes and leaders as they Pg vi are seen in boyhood and manhood alike in the environment of their every day home and social life With the purpose of quickening the imagination questions To the Pupil are introduced at intervals throughout the book and on almost every page additional questions of the same kind might be supplied to advantage What picture do you get in that paragraph may well be asked over and over again as children read the book If they get clear and definite pictures they will be likely to see the past as a living present and thus will experience anew the thoughts and feelings of those who now live only in their words and deeds The steps in this vital process are imagination sympathy and assimilation To the same end the excellent maps and illustrations contribute a prominent and valuable feature of the book Dictionary of United States History John Franklin Jameson,1894 The United States Catalog ,1903
