Reconstructing Historical Communities:

Reconstructing Historical Communities Alan MacFarlane, Sarah Harrison, Charles Jardine, 1977 Alan MacFarlane has studied the parishes of Earls Colne in Essex and Kirkby Lonsdale in Cumbria as well as other parishes and has undertaken anthropological fieldwork in a contemporary community in Nepal In collaboration with Sarah Harrison and Charles Jardine he has devised a method of collecting breaking down and then reintegrating historical records in a way which makes it possible to answer some of the sociological demographic anthropological geographical and other questions which interest many people For the amateur historian or genealogist who wants to know about a village or family the method makes it possible to find out almost everything that survives in historical documents concerning each person who lived in a village each plot of land and house Reconstructing historical communities, 1977 Reconstructing Historical Communities with a Computer A. MacFarlane, T. King, Social Science Research Council (Great Britain), 1981 Reconstructing Historical Communities with a Computer A. D. MacFarlane, Social Science Research Council (Great Britain), 1983 Reconstructing Historic Landmarks Wayne Brown, 2018-09-03 Historic reconstructions have been a consistent part of the historic preservation and heritage conservation movements in the United States and Canada Indeed reconstruction has been the primary tool at the most influential historic sites for example the Governor's Palace and the Capitol at Colonial Williamsburg USA and in Canada the Fortress of Louisbourg Dozens of other reconstructions have appeared during the past century in North America undertaken by individuals communities states and provinces and by national agencies responsible for cultural heritage Despite this prevalence historic reconstructions have received little scholarly attention and the question of what motivated the proponents of these projects remains largely unexamined This book explores that question through detailed studies of ten historic reconstructions located throughout Canada and the United States ranging from 1908 to 2011 Drawing upon diverse archival sources and site investigations the proponents of each site are given voice to address their need to remake these landmarks be it to sustain to challenge or even subvert a historical narrative or with reference to contemporary heritage studies to reclaim these spaces Reconstructing Historic Landmarks provides a fascinating insight into these shifting concepts of history in North America and will be of considerable interest both to students and scholars of historic preservation and indeed to heritage professionals involved in reconstructions themselves Reconstructing Historical Communities with a Computer C. J. Jardine, 1979 How to Make a Database in Historical Studies Tiago Luís Gil, 2021-07-27 This book is a greatly supplemented translation from Portuguese originally published in 2015 It discusses the most appropriate ways to create databases for research on history and other humanities including an extensive debate about the usages that historians have made of computing since the 1950s It has four chapters the first is dedicated to theoretical and methodical questions about the usage of databases in history the second is about technical issues the third presents the concept of research engineering how to improve research in groups the last is about the construction of databases The author states that the use of technology in research in history and humanities should be preceded and mediated by theories and methods which deal with these disciplines and not by technical issues The historian must know how to think correctly in order to use the technological tools in an autonomous way The book provides a background demonstrating how theory methodology and technique are always articulated in historical research and will appeal to history students and researchers
