Reinventing the Symptom Luke Thurston, 2022-09-13 The essays collected in Reinventing the Symptom explore the final period of Jacques Lacan's teaching focusing on his 1975-76 seminar Le sinthome This book sheds light on the central questions of this last phase of Lacanian theory and unravels the principal enigmas of the seminars The work as a whole breaks through previous obstacles to the act of reading Lacan's last work among them the notorious restrictions placed upon the publication and translation of Lacan's teachings The contributors examine Lacan's late work from a variety of perspectives They consider his theories on Borromean knot topology and rethink readings of his views on sexual difference his encounter with Joyce and even his consideration that his work was not theory at all but rather a kind of writing These lucid essays offer a dazzling reading of works previously considered elusive Students and practitioners of psychoanalysis alike will benefit from this revolutionary collection The contributors mark the territory for a more widespread deployment of Lacanian theory in our cultural landscape from modernism to deconstruction and feminism At last those who seek to approach Lacanian thought and apply its relevance to their own fields have a radical new tool made readily available to them

Reinventing (with) Theory in Rhetoric and Writing Studies Andrea Alden, Kendall Gerdes, Judy Holiday, Ryan Skinnell, 2019-10-21 Reinventing with Theory in Rhetoric and Writing Studies collects original scholarship that takes up and extends the practices of inventive theorizing that characterize Sharon Crowley's body of work Including sixteen chapters by established and emerging scholars and an interview with Crowley the book shows that doing theory is a contingent and continual rhetorical process that is indispensable for understanding situations and their potential significance and for discovering the available means of persuasion For Crowley theory is a basic building block of rhetoric produced by and within specific times and locations as a means of opening other ways of believing or acting Doing theory in this sense is the practice of surveying the common sense of the community doxa and discovering the available means of persuasion invention The ultimate goal of doing theory is not to prescribe certain actions but to ascertain what options exist for rhetors to see the world differently to discover new possibilities for thought and action and thereby to effect change in the world The scholarship collected in Reinventing with Theory in Rhetoric and Writing Studies takes Crowley's notion of theory as an invitation to develop new avenues for believing and acting By reinventing the understanding of theory and its role in the field this collection makes an important contribution to scholarship in rhetorical studies and writing studies It will be valuable to scholars teachers and students interested in diverse theoretical directions in rhetoric and writing studies as well as in race gender and disability theories religious rhetorics digital rhetoric and the history of rhetoric Publication supported in part by
