Managing Irrigation Analyzing And Improving The Performance Of Bureaucracies:

Managing Irrigation Norman Thomas Uphoff, Priti Ramamurthy, Roy Steiner, 1991 Managing Irrigation Norman Uphoff, Priti Ramamurthy, Roy Steiner, 1991-05 Increasing attention has been given in recent years to how the participation of farmers in irrigation management can improve the efficiency equity and overall performance of irrigation systems This book addresses the other part of the management equation namely the structure and performance of bureaucracies that are responsible for managing these systems Assessing the outcomes of IWMI's research and interventions on irrigation management transfer Giordano, Meredith, Samad, Madar, Namara, Regassa, 2006 The purpose of this paper is to summarize IIMI IWMI's past research and interventions related to irrigation management transfer and to document to the extent possible the academic policy and technical outcomes of these efforts The application of a range of direct and indirect measurement techniques suggests an overall positive contribution from IWMI to IMT theory and application

Bureaucracy and Development Diana Suhardiman, 2014-12-26 The fall of the New Order government in 1998 and the political reform that followed posed substantial challenges for Indonesia's bureaucracy to continue fulfilling its mandate This book analyses the process of bureaucratic reform in the irrigation sector Using Irrigation Management Transfer policy as the entry point for analysis it documents and analyses the irrigation bureaucracy's ability to sustain its power and prominence in the sector's development amidst and against national and international pressures for reform The book argues that bureaucratic reform in the irrigation sector rather than attempting to change the bureaucracy's functioning in the image of national and global good governance perspectives and priorities should instead focus on linking the irrigation bureaucracy's everyday practice more effectively with farmers' needs and aspirations Reform efforts of the past decades show that Indonesia's irrigation sector development cannot be redirected without the irrigation bureaucracy's knowledge experience and cooperation and without strengthening its downward accountability to farmer irrigators Managing Salinization

Waltina Scheumann, 2012-12-06 Salinization of soils is a major threat to irrigated agriculture and counteracts the targets of costly public infrastructure investments In this study salinization is regarded as the outcome of an institutional arrangement which impedes the effective implementation of well known and well established control measures be they technical managerial or economic In public irrigation systems neither the management units nor the farmers are offered any incentives towards the control of high groundwater levels and salinization if the management units are embedded in a highly centralized non market institutional setting The author answers the question under which conditions management units and irrigators are active in halting and reversing the process of salinization The SAGE Handbook of Governance Mark Bevir, 2010-12-14 The study of governance has risen to prominence as a way of describing and explaining changes in our world The SAGE Handbook of Governance presents an authoritative and innovative overview of this fascinating field with particular emphasis on the significant new and emerging theoretical issues and policy innovations The Handbook is divided into three parts Part one explores the major theories influencing current thinking and shaping future research in the field of governance Part two deals specifically with changing practices and policy innovations including the changing role of the state transnational and global governance markets and networks public management and budgeting and finance Part three explores the dilemmas of managing governance including attempts to rethink democracy and citizenship as well as specific policy issues such as capacity building regulation and sustainable development This volume is an excellent resource for advanced students and researchers in political science economics geography sociology and public administration Mark Bevir is a Professor of Political Science at the University of California Berkeley

Institutional Design Principles for Accountability in Large Irrigation Systems Douglas J. Merrey, Margreet Zwarteveen, 1996 Argues that single irrigation systems managed by autonomous system specific organizations accountable to their customers perform better and are more sustainable than those managed by agencies dependent on the government or by agencies responsible for multiple systems Selected cases are reviewed and the plausibility of this hypothesis established General recommendations are made for policy makers designing irrigation reform programs

Water, Technology and Development Martin Hvidt, 1998-12-31 Egyptian agriculture is uniquely dependent on water with over 95 per cent of agricultural production originating from land irrigated by the Nile The improvement of irrigation systems and better control over water by farmers is therefore crucial to the drive to raise productivity in the current context of scarce water resources rich but underutilized land and changes in the institutional environment of the economy after liberalization This text evaluates the ambitious state of the art Irrigation Improvement Project IIP and should be of interest to all those concerned with issues of water and development in the Middle East

Capacity Building for Participatory Irrigation Management in Sindh Province of Pakistan Yameen Memon, Mustafa Talpur, Hammond Murray-Ruest, 2000 Based on a project in which IWMI assessed the training needs of the farmers under the Farmer Managed Irrigated Agriculture FMIA the study highlights the importance of training in areas such as effective communication strategies and conflict resolution equitable water distribution optimum use of water financial management and developing a business plan

Expanding the Frontiers of Irrigation Management Research Douglas J. Merrey, 1997 Research results performances assessment Research results design and operation of irrigation systems Research results policy institutions and management Research results health and environment Training and institutional strengthening Conclusions outputs impacts and future directions
