Pastoralism and Climate Change in East Africa Yanda, Pius Zebhe, Mung'ong'o, Claude Gasper, 2018-08-03 Pastoralism and Climate Change in East Africa provides systematic and robust empirical investigations on the impact of climate change on pastoral production systems as well as participating in the ongoing debate over the efficacy of traditional pastoralism. This book is an initial product of the Project Building Knowledge to Support Climate Change Adaptation for Pastoralist Communities in East Africa implemented by the Centre for Climate Change Studies of the University of Dar es Salaam with support from the Open Society Initiative for Eastern Africa. Traditional pastoralism has proved to be a resilient and unique system of adaptations in a dynamic process of unpredictable climatic variability and continuous human interactions with the natural environment in dryland ecosystems. Pastoral adaptations and climate-induced innovative coping mechanisms have strategically been embedded in the indigenous social structures and resource management value systems. Pastoral livelihoods have nevertheless become increasingly vulnerable to climate change impacts as a result of prolonged marginalization and harmful external interventions. The negative effect of global climate change has been an added dimension to the already prevailing crisis in the pastoral livelihood system which is substantially driven by non-climatic factors of internal and external pressures of change such as population growth, bad governance and shrinking rangelands lost to competing activities.

Managing Resources in Erratic Environments Nancy A. McCarthy, Celine Dutilly-Diane, 2004-01-01 This study analyzes the links between risk and the kinds of property rights that have evolved to provide the mobility necessary to raise livestock in drought-prone countries in this case Burkina Faso, Ethiopia and Niger. The study also evaluates the impact of cooperation on resource management in these environments. The express purpose of this research is to contribute to the current debate on resource management in highly variable environments focusing on the impact of climate variability and the role of cooperation in resource management. More specifically, a conceptual framework is developed to analyze the impact of climatic variability and cooperative capacity on land allocation patterns, stock densities and patterns of herd mobility. Overall, the empirical results suggest that effective policies for sustainable land management and crisis response plans may require the design and implementation of mechanisms to increase cooperative capacity.

Rangeland Degradation and Recovery in China's Pastoral Lands Victor R. Squires, Lu Xinshi, 2009 This book provides reference material for those responsible for grazing land management in China and its long-term consequences, environmental, social and economic. It responds to the urgent need to collate and review some of the major degradation experienced in China's vast pastoral lands. An outline is presented of the major biological processes and socioeconomic influences that operate in selected pastoral rangelands in China. In this book, the authors have confined their analysis to the impact on the resource from a rangeland user's perspective but recognized the much wider impacts and urge fellow researchers to take up the challenge of addressing the environmental and social impacts.

of these major land degradation episodes The historical case studies described in the book represent a failure to manage for the extreme climate variability that characterizes north and west China's vast arid rangelands Pastoralism in Africa's drylands Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2018-10-29 Pastoral livestock production is crucial to the livelihoods and the economy of Africa's semiarid regions It developed 7 000 years ago in response to long term climate change It spread throughout Northern Africa as an adaptation to the rapidly changing and increasingly unpredictable arid climate It is practiced in an area representing 43% of Africa's land mass in the different regions of Africa and in some regions it represents the dominant livelihoods system It covers 36 countries stretching from the Sahelian West to the rangelands of Eastern Africa and the Horn and the nomadic populations of Southern Africa with an estimate of 268 million pastoralists The mobility of pastoralists exploiting the animal feed resources along different ecological zones represents a flexible response to a dry and increasingly variable environment It allows pastoral herds to use the drier areas during the wet season and more humid areas during the dry season It ensures pastoral livestock to access sufficient high quality grazing and create economic value The objectives of this report are to investigate the current situation of pastoralism and the vulnerability context in which pastoralism currently functions and to outline the policy resilience programming and research areas of intervention to enhance the resilience of pastoral livelihoods systems Scholarly views of pastoralism's ecological impact have grown more positive since the early 1990s when a new understanding of dryland dynamics led to the so called new rangeland paradigm The new rangeland paradigm represents a shift in the wider discourse on pastoralism from the earlier debates based on the tragedy of the commons The new rangeland paradigm has provided a more comprehensive understanding of the drylands and shown that mobility is an appropriate strategy to exploit the natural resource base in these areas In recent decades the adaptability and mobility of pastoralism in relation to resource variability have been undermined by factors that are embedded in the institutional environment and policy that shape the vulnerability context of pastoralism The report analyzes five factors that undermine the pastoral livelihoods resilience and the implications of these factors for the viability of pastoralism On the basis of the analysis of vulnerability contexts that shape pastoralism the report identifies interventions for increasing pastoral resilience Resource Ecology Herbert H.T. Prins, Frank van Langevelde, 2008-01-21 This multi author book deals with resource ecology which is the ecology of trophic interactions between consumers and their resources All the chapters were subjected to intense group discussions comments and critiques were subsequently used for writing new versions which were peer reviewed Each chapter is followed by a comment This makes the book ideal for teaching and course work because it highlights the fact that ecology is a living and active research field Beyond the Biophysical Laura German, Joshua J. Ramisch, Ritu Verma, 2010-06-19 Beyond the Biophysical provides a broad overview of agriculture and natural resource management NRM scholarship and practice that lies beyond the biophysical emphasizing instead epistemological cultural and political foundations of NRM The volume is oriented toward professionals with expertise in agriculture and natural resource management scholarship and practice but who lack exposure to the conceptual and methodological underpinnings of critical theory the anthropology of development ecological anthropology and other relevant scholarship It therefore follows common standards of academic rigour but minimizes the use of jargon integrates detailed case studies with conceptual syntheses and attempts to move from critique to concrete recommendations for scholarship and practice The volume seeks to foster a more nuanced and responsible engagement with local communities and the natural world among NRM scholars and practitioners
