 Manchester Picture Post is a collection of images revealing one of the UK's most popular and varied cities From the skyline of modern landmarks like the Manchester Wheel and the imposing Beetham Tower to picturesque countryside views of the nearby peak district this book is a real celebration of life in and around Manchester , After the Shock City Tom Hulme, 2019 A comparative and trans national study of urban culture in Britain and the United States from the late nineteenth to the twentieth century Using the industrial cities of Manchester and Chicago as case studies this book traces the idea of citizenship across different areas of local life in the first half of the twentieth century from philosophy and festivals to historical re enactment and public housing Coalitions of voluntary associations municipal government and local elites lambasted modern urban culture as the cause of social disintegration But rather than simply decanting the population to new and smaller settlements they tried to re imagine a reformed city as a place that could foster loyal and healthy communities Celebrating civic progress in the period since the shock city of the nineteenth century they sought to create a sense of local pride that could bracket growing class and racial tensions The diverse individuals groups and communities of the city reacted in different ways to this message Some were happy to gather under the identity of one civic banner Others held back by discriminatory structures of society chose to shape their own idea of citizenship one that looked far beyond the city for a sense of belonging and rights Historians have tended to emphasise the rise of national identity state centralisation and popular patriotism at the expense of distinctive local identities municipal autonomy and expressions of civic pride This book aims to redress the imbalance demonstrating how local ideas of belonging could still exert a powerful hold on the making of modern citizenship TOM HULME is a lecturer in the School of History Anthropology Philosophy and Politics Queen's University Belfast A Guide to the New Ruins of Great Britain Owen Hatherley, 2011-07-01 Back in 1997 New Labour came to power amid much talk of regenerating the inner cities left to rot under successive Conservative governments Over the next decade British cities became the laboratories of the new enterprise economy glowing monuments to finance property speculation and the service industry until the crash In A Guide to the New Ruins of Great Britain Owen Hatherley sets out to explore the wreckage the buildings that epitomized an age of greed and aspiration From Greenwich to Glasgow Milton Keynes to Manchester Hatherley maps the derelict Britain of the 2010s from riverside apartment complexes art galleries and amorphous interactive centers to shopping malls call centers and factories turned into expensive lofts In doing so he provides a mordant commentary on the urban environment in which we live work and consume Scathing forensic bleakly humorous A Guide to the New Ruins of Great Britain is a coruscating autopsy of a get rich quick aspirational politics a brilliant architectural state we're in Eventful Cities Greg Richards, Robert Palmer, 2012-05-31 Processes of globalization economic restructuring and urban redevelopment have placed events at the centre of strategies for change in cities Events offer the potential to achieve economic social cultural and environmental outcomes within broader urban development strategies This volume analyzes the process of cultural event development management and marketing and links these processes to their wider cultural social and economic context provides a unique blend of practical and academic analysis with a selection of major events and festivals in cities where eventfulness has been an important element of development strategy examines the reasons why different stakeholders should collaborate as well as the reasons why cities succeed or fail to develop events and become eventful Eventful Cities evaluates theoretical perspectives and links theory and practice through case studies of cities and events across the world Critical success factors are identified which can help to guide cities and regions to develop event strategies This book is essential reading for any undergraduate or graduate student and all practitioners and policy makers involved in event management cultural management arts administration urban studies cultural studies and tourism
