Mande A Memoir:

Mande! Gail Dimitroff, 2004-01-01 Mande Command me The word reflects centuries of servitude in Mexico The few who dared to question its authority shook the foundations of their world Whither thou goest commanded a pregnant nineteen year old to follow her impoverished husband as he studied medicine in Monterrey Mexico Speaking no Spanish traveling alone with their tiny daughter Gail leapt into the unknown She emerged independent self confident autonomous and fully able to rebuild her foundation from the ground up Part adventure part nightmare part revelation Mande is a journey of defying boundaries to preserve the human spirit

A Muse of Fire Arnold D. Harvey, 1998-01-01 This is the first book to relate to the literature and art of the First World War to the literature and art produced by the Second World War and by earlier wars A Muse of Fire is also the first serious attempt to examine the whole range of war poetry and war fiction in English in its relation to the work of German French Italian and to a lesser extent Russian Danish and Hungarian authors Before 1914 few authors wrote about or experienced war War especially its reality was not the proper subject of literature while writers seldom served in the armed forces and were almost never in battle More than half this book deals with the First World War In successive chapters A D Harvey discusses what sort of people in what sort of physical and psychological conditions wrote about the war or painted it how they handled the challenge of describing their experiences with complete honesty what literary and artistic techniques they employed how other forms of creative talent were fostered by the war and how far memoirs of the war prepared the way for the next one The account given of the Second World War in the final section like the chapters on pre 1914 war literature provides far more than simply an introduction and conclusion to the central part of the book It is an important contribution to an understanding of how literature and art relate to the psychological and social structures of the communities within which they are produced This is the first book to relate to the literature and art of the First World War to the literature and art produced by the Second World War and by earlier wars A Muse of Fire is also the first serious attempt to examine the whole range of war poetry and war fiction in English in its relation to the work of German French Italian and to a lesser extent Russian Danish and Hungarian authors Before 1914 few authors wrote about or experienced war War especially its reality was not the proper subject of literature while writers seldom served in the armed forces and were almost never in battle More than half this book deals with the First World War In successive chapters A D Harvey discusses what sort of people in what sort of physical and psychological conditions wrote about the war or painted it how they handled the challenge of describing their experiences with complete honesty what literary and artistic techniques they employed how other forms of creative talent were fostered by the war and how far memoirs of the war prepared the way for the next one The account given of the Second World War in the final section like the chapters on pre 1914 war literature provides far more than simply an introduction and conclusion to the central part of the book It is an important contribution to an understanding of how literature and art relate to the psychological and social structures of the communities within which
