Forbidden Cargoes : Mystery Stories for Boys

Roy J. Snell, Forbidden Cargoes Mystery Stories for Boys In a plain board shack with a palm thatched roof which had the Caribbean Sea at its front and the Central American jungle at its back a slim stooping sort of boy with eyes that gleamed out of the dark corners exactly like a tiger s paced back and forth the length of a long low room His every motion suggested a jaguar s stealth It was Panther Eye a boy who was endowed with a cat s ability to see in the dark and who spent much of his young life in India and other tropical lands He also found himself quite at home in Central America Nevertheless at this moment he was in deep trouble The palm thatched shack boasted but one room As the boy paced the mahogany floor of this room he passed a desk of roughly hewn rosewood A small steel safe stood in one corner the door slightly ajar Before it on the floor lay a litter of papers a few bundles of letters and a sizeable roll of currency The boy paused to consider this litter It was the map they wanted he told himself Easy enough to see that They didn t even look at the money nearly a thousand dollars The map They knew we could do nothing without the map The dirty dogs If only Johnny Thompson were here Again he paced the floor What was to be done His thoughts were in a tangle The thieves who had broken into the safe were now well away in the jungle There was no time to be lost He d catch them he was sure of that A jaguar couldn t escape him much less a man Yet the map might be destroyed Without it nothing could be accomplished Thousands were at stake the treasure of a lifetime And some one dearer to Pant than life itself was scheduled to lose All day in that stuffy office he had waited for Johnny Now evening was near If only Johnny would come he repeated Had he but known it his good pal Johnny Thompson was some three hundred miles away What was more he was behind iron bars in a stout stone jail But this Pant could not know so he continued to pace the floor As the first long shadow of a palm darkened the window he suddenly sprang into action Throwing up the lid of a rough chest he tossed out a miscellaneous assortment of articles some small oilcloth wrapped packages a black box some fibre trays a few articles of clothing and a curious instrument of iron These he packed carefully in a kit bag then closed the chest
