The Perspective of School Personnel in a Georgia School District Concerning the Recruitment of Minority Teachers Shyla D. Ridley,2009

Author s abstract Recruiting and attracting minorities into the teaching profession is difficult Given the competitiveness of the current job market and the heavy emphasis on standardized testing for all teacher candidates the difficulties of attracting quality minority teachers are becoming more challenging The lack of a racially and culturally diverse teaching staff remains a major issue in education nationally and locally especially since projections indicate that the representation of minority teachers is declining while the number of minority students is increasing This need for more minority teachers is even more critical in urban public schools characterized by large percentages of minority students and rural hard to staff schools The purpose of the study was to identify effective recruitment strategies used to recruit minority teachers The researcher utilized qualitative methodology for this study The study was a single case study The research examined recruitment initiatives used by a school district utilizing interview questions administered to a select population of school and district level personnel The participants of the study were individuals who had the authority to speak about the recruitment and selection of minority teachers in their district that included the human resource director a school board member and the principal of an elementary school a middle school and a high school from the same Georgia public school district The results of the interviews were examined for the similarities and differences in the recruitment initiatives for minority teachers as perceived by the participants The interviews were recorded and transcribed by the researcher and the data organized classified and developed by themes Several themes emerged from these interviews It is important to recruit minority teachers because they serve as positive role models However participants focused on hiring the most qualified candidate regardless of race ethnicity The second prevailing theme was that no specific policies are in place regarding the recruitment of ethnic and minority teachers The third theme was that a computerized recruitment system seemed to be the most effective recruitment instrument Other strategies used to recruit minority teachers in the district included word of mouth job fairs and participation in the TAPP program Therefore recommendations from this study included the school district conduct a similar study to determine if all principals are aware of and are using the tools at their disposal for recruiting and retaining minority teachers the school district solicit best practices each year from principals who have successfully recruited minority teachers the human resource department publishes an annual report on the school district website that depicts hiring patterns of each school in the district and the human resource department provide annual reports to members of the board of education with the number of teachers and students in each school by racial and ethnic backgrounds

The Color of Teaching June Gordon, 2002-11-01 One of the major concerns in education at present is how to recruit and attract more teachers from ethnic minorities In an attempt to move beyond the superficial and simplistic responses as to why these students are not entering teaching this book presents in depth interviews with over two hundred people from four ethnic groups African Americans Native Americans Asian Americans and Latinos These interviewees many of them teachers or education professionals express their attitude towards teaching and their understanding of why others may not choose teaching as a career One of the most significant and surprising findings is that regardless of academic or socio economic standing students from these ethnic groups tend not to be encouraged to enter the teaching profession by their own families communities and peers The book concludes with a discussion of programmatic changes and calls for the reconceptualization of the role of teachers Such changes can only arise out of a fundamental change in attitude of communities of color towards teaching which must be led by teachers themselves
