R. Marr, 1904 Workers' Worlds Andrew Davies, 1992 Manchester and Salford have a special place in the history of the British working class They lay at the heart of the cotton industry the spark of the industrial revolution and as a consequence were among the first places to experience the application of steam power and the factory system to production As a result the Manchester Salford conurbation was the first to see a fully formed industrial working class Whilst industrialization went through its heroic phase the two cities seemed to be blazing a trail not only for the rest of the country but for the world During the first half of the 19th century social observers came from across Europe to see what they supposed to be their future Manchester was in Asa Briggs's influential phrase the shock city of the age The city demonstrated the ability of science to control nature this was why in 1843 Benjamin Disraeli described Manchester as the modern Athens However as Alexis de Tocqueville had noted eight years earlier there was another side to increasing productivity A Short History of Manchester and Salford Francis Archibald Bruton, 1970 The History of the County Palatine and Duchy of Lancaster Edward Baines, 1868 Making Scientific Instruments in the Industrial Revolution A.D. Morrison-Low, 2017-03-02 At the start of the Industrial Revolution it appeared that most scientific instruments were made and sold in London but by the time of the Great Exhibition in 1851 a number of provincial firms had the self confidence to exhibit their products in London to an international audience How had this change come about and why This book looks at the four main and two lesser English centres known for instrument production outside the capital Birmingham Liverpool Manchester and Sheffield along with the older population centres in Bristol and York Making wide use of new sources Dr Morrison Low curator of history of science at the National Museums of Scotland charts the growth of these centres and provides a characterisation of their products New information is provided on aspects of the trade especially marketing techniques sources of materials tools and customer relationships From contemporary evidence she argues that the principal output of the provincial trade with some notable exceptions must have been into the London marketplace anonymously and at the cheaper end of the market She also discusses the structure and organization of the provincial trade and looks at the impact of new technology imported from other closely allied trades By virtue of its approach and subject matter the book considers aspects of economic and business history gender and the family the history of science and technology material culture and patterns of migration It contains a myriad of stories of families and firms of entrepreneurs and customers and of organizations and arms of government In bringing together this wide range of interests Dr Morrison Low enables us to appreciate how central the making selling and distribution of scientific instruments was for the Industrial Revolution

Family and Business During the Industrial Revolution Hannah Barker, 2017 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 4.0 International licence It is free to read at Oxford Scholarship Online and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations Small businesses were at the heart of the economic growth and social transformation that characterized the industrial revolution in Britain In towns across north west England shops and workshops dominated the streetscape and helped to satisfy an increasing desire for consumer goods Yet despite their significance we know surprisingly little about these firms and the people who ran them for whilst those engaged in craft based manufacturing retailing and allied trades constituted a significant proportion of the urban population they have been generally overlooked by historians Instead our view of the world of business is more usually taken up by narratives of particularly successful firms and especially those involved in new modes of production By examining some of the forgotten businesses of the industrial revolution and the men and women who worked in them Family and Business During the Industrial Revolution presents a largely unfamiliar commercial world Its approach which spans economic social and cultural history as well as encompassing business history and the histories of the emotions space and material culture alongside studies of personal testimony testatory practice and property ownership tests current understandings of gender work family class and power in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries It provides us with new insights into the lives of ordinary men and women in trade whose relatively mundane lives are easily overlooked but who were central to the story of a pivotal period in British history
