Michael Tonry, 2014-12-15 Violent and property crime rates in all Western countries have been falling since the early and mid 1990s after rising in the 1970s and 1980s Few people have noticed the common patterns and fewer have attempted to understand or explain them Yet the implications are essential for thinking about crime control and criminal justice policy more broadly Crime rates in Canada and the United States for example have moved in parallel for 40 years but Canada has neither increased its imprisonment rate nor adopted harsher criminal justice policies The implication is that something other than mass imprisonment zero tolerance policing and three strikes laws explains why crime rates in our time are falling The essays in this 43rd volume of Crime and Justice explore the possibilities cross nationally They document the common rises and falls in crime and look at possible explanations including changes in sensitivity to violence generally and intimate violence in particular macro level changes in self control and structural and economic developments in modern states The contributors to this volume include Marcelo Aebi Andromachi Tseloni Eric Baumer Manuel Eisner Graham Farrell Janne Kivivuori Tapio Lappi Seppä Suzy McElrath Richard Rosenfeld Rossella Selmini

Nick Tilley and Kevin T Wolff Mechanistic Criminology K. Ryan Proctor, Richard E. Niemeyer, 2019-05-23 The science of criminology is at a crossroads Despite accumulating a dizzying array of facts about crime the field has yet to identify a body of theories that allows for the adequate prediction explanation and control of phenomena of central interest to criminologists Mechanistic Criminology locates this problem within the field's failure to conform to the expectations of scientific fields and reliance on antiquated methods of theory construction The authors contend that this failure has resulted in an inability of criminologists to engage in theory falsification and competition two central activities of science that produce the forms of reliable knowledge that are unique to scientific fields Mechanistic Criminology advocates for the adoption of a mechanistic mode of theorizing to allow criminologists to engage in theory falsification and competition and ignite rapid scientific discovery in the field The proposed method is the same one employed within the biological sciences which is responsible for their rapid scientific progress in the late twentieth and early twenty first centuries Should criminologists adopt this mechanistic approach criminology could experience the same scientific revolution that is occurring in the biological sciences and criminologists would generate the knowledge necessary for the prediction explanation and control of crime
