American Culture, American Tastes Michael Kammen, 2012-10-03 Americans have a long history of public arguments about taste the uses of leisure and what is culturally appropriate in a democracy that has a strong work ethic Michael Kammen surveys these debates as well as our changing taste preferences especially in the past century and the shifting perceptions that have accompanied them Professor Kammen shows how the post traditional popular culture that flourished after the 1880s became full blown mass culture after World War II in an era of unprecedented affluence and travel He charts the influence of advertising and opinion polling the development of standardized products shopping centers and mass marketing the separation of youth and adult culture the gradual repudiation of the genteel tradition and the commercialization of organized entertainment He stresses the significance of television in the shaping of mass culture and of consumerism in its reconfiguration over the past two decades Focusing on our own time Kammen discusses the use of the fluid nature of cultural taste to enlarge audiences and increase revenues and reveals how the public role of intellectuals and cultural critics has declined as the power of corporate sponsors and promoters has risen As a result of this diminution of cultural authority he says definitive pronouncements have been replaced by divergent points of view and there is as well a tendency to blur fact and fiction reality and illusion An important commentary on the often conflicting ways Americans have understood defined and talked about their changing culture in the twentieth century

American Historical Pageantry David Glassberg, 1990 What images shape Americans perceptions of their past How do particular versions of history become the public history And how have these views changed over time David Glassberg explores these important questions by examining the pageantry craze of the

Channeling the Past Erik Christiansen, 2013-03-15 After the turmoil of the Great Depression and World War II Americans looked to the nation's more distant past for lessons to inform its uncertain future By applying recent and emerging techniques in mass communication including radio and television programs and commercial book clubs American elites working in media commerce and government used history to confer authority on their respective messages With insight and wit Erik Christiansen uncovers in

Channeling the Past the ways that powerful corporations rewrote history to strengthen the postwar corporate state while progressives communists and other leftists vied to make their own versions of the past more popular Christiansen looks closely at several notable initiatives CBS's flashback You Are There program the Smithsonian Museum of American History constructed in the late 1950s the Cavalcade of America program sponsored by the Du Pont Company the History Book Club and the Freedom Train a museum on rails that traveled the country from 1947 to 1949 exhibiting historic documents and flags including original copies of the U S Constitution and the Magna Carta It is often said that history is written by the victors but Christiansen offers a more nuanced perspective history is constantly remade to suit the objectives of those with the resources to do it He provides dramatic evidence of sophisticated calculations that influenced both public opinion and historical memory and shows that Americans relationships with the past changed as a result

Locating American Studies Lucy Maddox, 1999 This collection of 17 essays first printed in American Quarterly the journal of the American Studies Association To mark the Association's 50th anniversary in 1998 the editor has brought together works by a group of scholars which she believes provide a window into the history and evolution of the practice of American studies Each essay originally published between 1950 and 1996 is accompanied by a commentary in which a scholar from a related field provides critical information for understanding the continuing importance of the work to the American Studies field
