The Red Lacquer Bridge Lucile Cattermole Regan,Maggie Shelton,2006 Her great aunt s stories were the gateway to a mystery she claimed to have taught at a school on an island situated in the heart of the Los Angeles harbor She described a Japanese fishing village complete with shops a church a temple and a small elementary school But the village was gone and no one seemed to know anything about it Twenty two years after the death of her Aunt Lucile Maggie Shelton was given a small cardboard box In it were treasures from 70 years before evidence at last that her aunt s stories were true But instead of solving the mystery the contents posed deeper and darker questions than before Who had destroyed this village leaving not a trace of the 500 homes and 3 000 people who had lived there Why was it a secret And where were the children whose sweet faces looked out from the photos her great aunt had kept in the box The contents of that box led Maggie on a journey that ended with the discovery of a treasure her great aunt had found two generations before her

The Nature of Disaster in China Chris Courtney,2018-02-15 In 1931 China suffered a catastrophic flood that claimed millions of lives This was neither a natural nor human made disaster Rather it was created by an interaction between the environment and society Regular inundation had long been an integral feature of the ecology and culture of the middle Yangzi yet by the modern era floods had become humanitarian catastrophes Courtney describes how the ecological and economic effects of the 1931 flood pulse caused widespread famine and epidemics He takes readers into the inundated streets of Wuhan describing the terrifying and disorientating sensory environment He explains why locals believed that an angry Dragon King was causing the flood and explores how Japanese invasion and war with the Communists inhibited both official relief efforts and refugee coping strategies This innovative study offers the first in depth analysis of the 1931 flood and charts the evolution of one of China s most persistent environmental problems Dream of the Red Chamber Xueqin Cao,1929
