influence the ability to implement low carbon development patterns Drawing on the theoretical foundations of the climate governance and urban planning literatures the book provides a context to understand plan implementation challenges and obstacles in metropolitan areas As metropolitan regions across the globe seek to reduce emissions from transportation many levels of governments have developed ambitious climate action plans that make land use and transportation recommendations in order to reduce vehicle miles traveled Many have recommended low carbon development patterns which are characterized by intensified and diversified uses around rapid transit stations However the implementation of these recommendations is done within the context of different rules in use unique to the planning systems in each metropolitan region The book examines the rules in use in three metropolitan regions of similar demographic size the Metro Vancouver Puget Sound and the Stuttgart regions By examining the implementation of low carbon development patterns the book focuses on growth management related questions about how to coordinate transit investments with land use decisions in metropolitan regions The book finds that state legislation that deals with metropolitan planning and regional growth strategies can greatly aid in creating accountability among actors as well as provide a road map to navigate conflicts when implementing low carbon development patterns By focusing on the rules in use the book is of interest to policy makers planners advocates and researchers who wish to assess and improve the odds of implementing low carbon development patterns in a metropolitan region
