Modeling Nature Episodes In The History Of Population Ecology Science And Its Conceptual Foundations:

Modeling Nature Sharon E. Kingsland, 1988 Modeling Nature Sharon E. Kingsland, 1995-10-16 The first history of population ecology traces two generations of science and scientists from the opening of the twentieth century through 1970 Kingsland chronicles the careers of key figures and the field's theoretical, empirical, and institutional development with special attention to tensions between the descriptive studies of field biologists and later mathematical models This second edition includes a new afterword that brings the book up to date with special attention to the rise of the new natural history and debates about ecology's future as a large scale scientific enterprise Picturing Ecology Damian Hughes, 2022-08-10

This book examines the role of photography and visual culture in the emergence of ecological science between 1895 and 1939 Building the Urban Environment Harold L Platt, 2015-10 History and critique of post World War II urban planning explores its effects on the environment race labor housing and municipal administration A Monastery for the Ibex Wilko Graf von Hardenberg, 2021-02-23 Gran Paradiso National Park is Italy's oldest and was instrumental in preventing the extinction of the Alpine ibex between World War I and just after World War II Today there are more than 30 000 ibex living in the Alps all of which descended from that last colony protected in Gran Paradiso under Mussolini's rule Wilko Graf von Hardenberg merges the history of conservation with the area's social history and Italy's larger political history to produce a multifaceted narrative about the park as an institution the conflicts it triggered and practices adopted to manage the ibex despite hurdles placed by the fascist regime The book's central argument is that in fascist Italy preservation propaganda notwithstanding was a product of the regime's continuities with the previous liberal system Italy's total fascist transformation accomplished only more than a decade after Mussolini took power virtually unmade the early successes of preservation set in place by the nascent nature state in the regime's early years Despite this conflict conservationists succeeded in preserving the ibex Hardenberg positions this success within the broader history of science conservation and tourism in fascist Italy and the Alpine region creating a comprehensive historical background and comparative reference to ongoing debates about the role of nature conservation in general and in relation to the state and its agencies

Catastrophic Thinking David Sepkoski, 2020-09-24 A history of scientific ideas about extinction that explains why we learned to value diversity as a precious resource at the same time as we learned to think catastrophically about extinction We live in an age in which we are repeatedly reminded by scientists by the media by popular culture of the looming threat of mass extinction We're told that human activity is currently producing a sixth mass extinction perhaps of even greater magnitude than the five previous geological catastrophes that drastically altered life on Earth Indeed there is a very real concern that the human species may itself be poised to go the way of the dinosaurs victims of the most recent mass extinction some 65 million years ago How we interpret the causes and consequences of extinction and their ensuing moral imperatives is deeply embedded in the cultural values of any given historical moment And as David Sepkoski reveals the history of scientific ideas about extinction over the past two hundred years as both a past and a current process is implicated in major changes in the way Western society has approached biological and cultural diversity. It seems self-evident to most of us that diverse ecosystems and societies are intrinsically valuable but the current fascination with diversity is a relatively recent phenomenon. In fact the way we value diversity depends crucially on our sense that it is precarious, that it is something actively threatened and that its loss could have profound consequences. In Catastrophic Thinking Sepkoski uncovers how and why we learned to value diversity as a precious resource at the same time as we learned to think catastrophically about extinction.

Endangerment, Biodiversity and Culture Fernando Vidal, Nélia Dias, 2015-06-19 The notion of Endangerment stands at the heart of a network of concepts, values and practices dealing with objects and beings considered threatened by extinction and with the procedures aimed at preserving them. Usually animated by a sense of urgency and citizenship, identifying endangered entities involves evaluating an impending threat and opens the way for preservation strategies. Endangerment, Biodiversity and Culture looks at some of the fundamental ways in which this process involves science but also more than science: not only data and knowledge and institutions but also affects and values. Focusing on an endangerment sensibility, it encapsulates tensions between the normative and the utilitarian, the natural and the cultural. The chapters situate that specifically modern sensibility in historical perspective and examine central aspects of its recent and present forms. This timely volume offers the most cutting-edge insights into the Environmental Humanities for researchers working in Environmental Studies, History, Anthropology, Sociology and Science and Technology Studies.

Entomology, Ecology and Agriculture Paolo Palladino, 2013-05-13 This study is facilitated by following economic entomologists and ecologists changing ideas about different pest control strategies: chiefly chemical, biological and integrated control. The author then follows the efforts of one specific group of entomologists at the University of California over three generations from their advocacy of biological controls in the 1930s and 40s through their shifting attention to the development of an integrated pest management in the context of big biology during the 1970s.
