Rescuing History from the Nation Prasenjit Duara, 1996-11-20 Prasenjit Duara offers the first systematic account of the relationship between the nation state nationalism and the concept of linear history Focusing primarily on China and including discussion of India Duara argues that many historians of postcolonial nation states have adopted a linear evolutionary history of the Enlightenment colonial model As a result they have written repressive exclusionary and incomplete accounts The backlash against such histories has resulted in a tendency to view the past as largely constructed imagined or invented In this book Duara offers a way out of the impasse between constructionism and the evolving nation he redefines history as a series of multiple often conflicting narratives produced simultaneously at national local and transnational levels In a series of closely linked case studies he considers such examples as the very different histories produced by Chinese nationalist reformers and partisans of popular religions the conflicting narratives of statist nationalists and of advocates of federalism in early twentieth century China He demonstrates the necessity of incorporating contestation appropriation repression and the return of the repressed subject into any account of the past that will be meaningful to the present Duara demonstrates how to write histories that resist being pressed into the service of the national subject in its progress or stalled progress toward modernity
