first met him way back in 1959 and he was 16 or 17 years old Dundee says his mind consumed by glorious memories I was in a hotel in Louisville Kentucky preparing one of my fighters and I got a call My name is Cassius Marcellus Clay and I m the Golden Gloves champion of Louisville I won the gloves in Chicago I won the gloves in Seattle and I m going to win the Olympics This was him the energetic kid who wanted to talk to me because he had seen me on TV because I had about six fighters who would fight every other week on CBS back when we had public television He wanted to talk to me because he was curious how I trained my fighters I had no idea who he was because I never paid attention to the amateurs I let him come up to the room and we had a conversation and it was beautiful It was like a kid at school who wanted to learn more and Muhammad wanted to learn more about boxing Seduced by his mischievous confidence Angelo eventually agreed to guide Clay But he quickly realised there was no point in trying to change him Crucially for their longevity Dundee knew that harnessing what came naturally would suffocate the magic Instead he watched and listened carefully while devising Clay s route to the top Professional boxing was in a mess when he came along in 1960 Under investigation it was exposed as a sport run by racketeers with strong influences from the Mob Even when some influential gangsters were jailed for their interference in the career of welterweight champion Don Jordan the sport continued to struggle There were televised tragedies in the ring and the calls for boxing to be abolished got louder But they never quite got as loud as Cassius Clay He quickly realised that incessant talking boasting making up outrageous poetry and harassing opponents was the way to a fortune Through it all Dundee stood back and watched
